Baby Clipper Unreported On $30 Hop To Europe

Los Angeles Youth Hoping to Make 3,600 Miles on 160 Gallons of Gas

By the Associated Press.

Old Orchard, Me., May 28.—The Baby Clipper, a tiny single-engined monoplane piloted by 24-year-old Thomas Smith, tonight was somewhere between America and Ireland on an unauthorized transatlantic flight.

Smith calculated his 160 gallons of gasoline, stored in extra tanks aboard the 670-pound plane, would keep his 4-cylinder, 65-horsepower engine running for 3,600 miles in from 32 to 40 hours, barring adverse weather.

He lifted the plane from the beach here at 3:47 a. m. (E. S. T.) this morning, and tonight was unreported, except for indications he had passed over St. John, N. B., a little more than two hours after the take-off. A plane was heard circling over the fog-shrouded airport there about 6 a. m., and was believed to have headed east over the Atlantic.

The plane carried no radio, and was capable of communication only should it sight a ship or a settlement. Smith took with him three canvas bags to be dropped with messages reporting his progress.

With the first light of dawn breaking over the tide-hardened sands, Smith took his plane into the mists while flares and flashlights of news photographers lighted his path and a group of 50 well-wishers cheered him on.

Headed for Ireland

"Europe is as close as I can tell you," Smith said of his destination. Associates said he would point his silver-winged craft for Slyne Head, Ireland, 2,800 miles away. He hoped his plane's normal cruising speed of 100 miles an hour would bring him over Europe about noon tomorrow.

The solo flight, Smith said, was to demonstrate the practicability of light planes for long distance flights. Members of Smith's party estimated the cost of gasoline and oil for the ocean jaunt at less than $30.

Smith's plotted course took him up the Maine Coast to Newfoundland, whence he would turn into the Great Circle route traversed by numerous other airmen. He carried no radio, but the narrow confines of his cabin were further reduced by navigation and technical instruments.

A flier of nine years' experience, Smith formerly lived in Clarksburg, W. Va., and had been a pilot for the Detroit-St. Louis-Marquette line.

Smith stowed away in his tiny cockpit four sandwiches, a couple of chocolate bars and two thermos bottles, one containing water and the other a soft drink. In his emergency kit he had first aid materials, a knife, revolver and roll of mosquito netting—the latter in case of a forced landing on the northern Atlantic Coastal wilderness.

Smith's route followed the course most recently attempted by Carl Bachman, Swedish airman, who has been unreported since his takeoff on a flight to Sweden.

Last fall, Smith helped to set a light plane endurance mark of 218 hours 23 minutes over Rosamond Dry Lake near Los Angeles, Calif.

"Cards Against Him"

By International News Service.

"The cards are against him," Chairman Robert H. Hinkley, of the CAA, said in Washington last night as he disclosed that Smith had obtained no Government license for the flight. "The law of averages is against such a flight, considering the hazards involved."

Smith's "flying perambulator" is far smaller and less powerful than the $900 jaloppy in which Douglas (Wrong-Way) Corrigan flew to Ireland to the astonishment of the world.

"I hope he makes it," Hinckley said. "The CAA did not give permission for the flight. Application for such flights are not looked upon with favor. Contributions of such flights to aviation are negligible. But, of course, I hope he makes it."

Atlantic Clipper Lands at Lisbon

Lisbon, Portugal, May 28 (AP).—The Atlantic Clipper alighted on the Tagus River here at 7:39 p. m., G. M. T. (2:39 p. m., E. S. T.) today, completing the overwater hops of the second of Pan-American Airways' regular air service flights between New York and Europe.

Conductor Holds to Brakeman, Who Lifts D. C. Mother From Tracks as Fishing Party Friends Look On

Two quick-witted, strong-armed trainmen yesterday saved a Sunday afternoon fishing party from a tragic end by a rescue which could give cards and spades for theatrics to any old-time Hollywood thriller.

The heroes were Baltimore & Ohio freight brakeman R. C. McGaha, 40, and Conductor George W. Moler, 48, who stood on the steps of a caboose on a freight train backing toward Georgetown over the trestle spanning the C. & O. Canal 500 yards south of Chain Bridge. They rescued Mrs. Elizabeth Funderburk, 22, who stood paralyzed with fright in the middle of the trestle.

While other members of the fishing party found refuge at the end of the ties, or below on the trestle abutment, Mrs. Funderburk stood rooted to the spot, as the freight suddenly appeared around a blind curve.

Slams Breaks On

Moler turned on the air brakes when he saw the stranded woman, but realizing the 19-car train could not stop in time, held on to McGaha with one hand and to a handle on the caboose with the other. McGaha leaned far forward, and in an instant before the train would have either hurled the young mother to a roadway, 60 feet below, or crushed her under the wheels, he seized her with one arm. The two men held her above the ties until the train came to a stop across the span.

Mrs. Funderburke's brush with death began as a fishing party with her husband, D. L. Funderburke, 30, and daughter, Barbara, 2, of 1467 Irving street northwest and Robert Dyke, 41, of 1471 Irving street northwest, his wife, Grace, 34, and their daughter, Joanne, 5.

They were crossing the span to try their luck on the other side of the canal. Moler said the rescued woman told him that he hesitated to make the trip, but her husband assured her that no trains used the bridge. Funderburke facetiously imitated the noise of a train.

"And first thing I knew, there was the train!" he told reporters.

Funderburke seized his child and ducked between the ties, the passing train just grazing his shoulder. Mrs. Dyke flattened out on the end of the ties while her husband stood with Joanne on the side where the ties were longer.

She Couldn't Move

According to Mrs. Funderburke, "I had it in mind to move, but I couldn't make my feet work; then when the train got closer I knew if I did move I'd fall down and all I could see was cars on the road under me. He got me around the waist with one arm. I just clung on for dear life. I was too nervous to thank him."

Moler commented, "I've seen those things oft enough in the mov-

Ordway To Leave Civil Service Post

Backer of Executive Orders of June, 1938, Feels His Job Is Done

By Alfred Friendly

Samuel H. Ordway, jr., Republican member of the Civil Service Commission, will resign June 1 to resume his private New York City law practice.

His conviction that in his position an administrator, not a lawyer, is necessary for the future progress of the merit system is known to be responsible for his decision.

Ordway, a lanky, pipe-smoking Harvard graduate, 39 years old, nursed through to passage the executive orders of June 24, 1938, the most significant revamping of the civil service system in more than 30 years. The orders provided for new methods of promotion in the Government service, intensified in-service training, specialists in personnel administration in each department and agency, and new methods of examination and certification of applicants for Federal jobs.

For some time it has been known that Ordway felt his usefulness as a commissioner was ended, particularly after he had seen his pet objectives brought to accomplishment. These were, after the issuance of the executive orders, first, the establishment of a council of personnel administration under the chairmanship of Frederick M. Davenport, who Ordway has publicly stated is an ideal man for the job; second, an increased budget for the

5 Charred Bodies Of Children Taken From Razed Home

Tama, Iowa, May 28 (AP).—A coroner's jury today viewed the bodies of five children, the oldest 9, who burned to death last night in the two-story frame home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Price.

Clifford Shaw, a neighbor, told the tragic story of the frightened youngsters. A sixth child fled from the burning building. The parents and two older children were not at home.

"I could hear the children whimpering and screaming on the second floor," Shaw said. "I called them, but they wouldn't come down. They said they were afraid . . . Then I lighted a bunch of matches and got on the stairs. The smoke was so thick I passed out. Somehow I revived enough to crawl out."

Thousands to Parade in D. C. Tribute to Nation's War Dead

Washington's patriotic, religious and veterans' organizations today made ready for the solemn and reverent finale tomorrow of the four-day tribute to the Nation's war dead. Yesterday thousands gave honor to their fallen comrades of three great wars in the Capital's cemeteries, shrines and places of worship.

Tomorrow most of the organizations, whose services in the preceding three days have been conducted separately, will come together in joint observance of the charge laid on them 71 years ago by Maj. Gen. John A. Logan, commander of the Grand Army of the Republic, in "cherishing tenderly the memory of our heroic dead" in Memorial Day's impressive climax-services at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

Preceding the observances in Arlington National Cemetery, where Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, will be chief speaker, the Capital's traditional parade, in abeyance for three years, again will march up Constitution avenue. Tak-

Aboard Royal Pilot Train, May 28. With three locomotives hauling it through the Rockies, the royal train moved over the Great Divide this afternoon and tonight was streaking toward Vancouver.

From their Buckingham Palace on Wheels, King George and Queen Elizabeth saw mountains whose peaks were lost in the clouds. They followed the well-named Kicking-horse River and saw it empty into the more placid Columbia. They saw glaciers and waterfalls that must have made them regret not bringing along England's poet laureate, John Masefield. Along the way, too, they saw moose and elk and deer.

Their Majesties went to church this morning. The King, dressed in a shepherd check suit, took his Queen to St. George's Church in Banff and they heard a sermon by the country canon.

Then followed a tour around Lake Louise, "most perfect gem of

Roosevelt Hears Hyde Park Pastor Chide His Flock

Hyde Park, N. Y., May 28.—President Roosevelt today worshiped in the Protestant Episcopal Church of St. James where two weeks hence he will pray with King George and Queen Elizabeth.

The President attended today with his mother, Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt, and heard the pastor, the Rev. Frank R. Wilson, reproach the congregation for its seeming indifference toward church activity. Mr. Roosevelt heard his pastor declare:

"We get very little interest in our Sunday school from you parents. When Johnny gets behind in school you go to the teacher to find out what's wrong. No one ever comes to us and says: 'Why isn't Johnny interested in Sunday school?'"

'Death-Kiss' Widow, Made to Eat, Better

Philadelphia, May 28 (U.P.).—Mrs. Rose Carina, the mass murder syndicate's alleged "kiss of death widow," tonight was reported in satisfactory condition at Hahnemann Hospital, where she had undergone a forced diet treatment as result of a three-day hunger strike.

Meanwhile, Federal Bureau of Investigation agents sought more fugitives, on information said to have been obtained from Mrs. Carina.

Tax Revision Put Ahead By Doughton

Treasury Proposal To Lift Exemption On Bonds Will Be Considered Later

By William V. Nessly.

The House Ways and Means Committee, in order to expedite tax revision, will not follow the Treasury's suggestion that provisions for taxing future issues of Government securities be worked into the measure, Chairman Doughton, of North Carolina, said last night.

While other members of House and Senate were warning that inclusion of the controversial tax-exemption removal would seriously endanger passage of the tax bill before the end of the fiscal year, June 30, Chairman Doughton declared "it is not our purpose" to make the tie-up. The question of removing exemption from the income from Government securities, he said, will be dealt with in a separate measure after the tax revision bill has been sent on to the House by the committee.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, on Saturday, had urged the committee to provide for removal of the exemption, as it now attracts to the exempt issues large sums which otherwise would be subject to heavy surtaxes. Only after such exemption was removed, he held, would it be proper to go into the question of whether the surtax rates on very large incomes are so high as to discourage investments in productive enterprises.

Immediate Opposition

Immediately there came opposition to attaching the exemption removal proposal to the tax revision bill. Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, himself an advocate of ending the exemption, warned yesterday that a fight, on constitutional grounds, would await the measure. The question of whether exemption may be ended by Congress, without a constitutional amendment, was raised.

Another factor in the fight is emphatic and widespread opposition of States and cities to imposition of taxes on the income from their securities, which they hold would compel them to pay higher interest rates.

Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, declared that including the exemption proposal probably would cause such protracted argument in the Senate as to seriously jeopardize the entire tax bill.

Representative Cooper, of Tennessee, chairman of the Ways and Means sub-committee in charge of the revision measure, voiced concern over the dangers of delay if the hook-up were attempted as favored by Morgenthau, and pointed out that public hearings had been promised on removal of the exemption.

Way Clear for Harmony

Doughton's statement, later last night, apparently ended all possibility of the Treasury plan for simultaneous action being carried out, and paved the way for relatively harmonious passage of the revision

1 Drowns, 2 Lost As Boat Capsizes With 28 Aboard

New York, May 28 (AP).—A gay Sunday fishing party suddenly turned into a scramble for life in the treacherous currents of the East River today when the 32-foot cabin cruiser Bilot capsized with the known loss of one dead and two missing.

Overturned by the heavy wash of a passing ship, the craft pitched 24 members of the party and its crew of four into the water off Seventy-seventh street, north of Welfare Island.

Assistant Attorney Alexander Herman ordered the captain, Bill Weedon, 43, of Astoria, arrested on a technical charge of homicide, holding there was a question as to whether the Bilot was overloaded.

Quick action by a lifeboat crew from the excursion steamer Yale, standing nearby in the river channel, was credited with preventing a greater death toll. The lifeboat crew rescued more than half of the 28 men.

100 German Exiles Barred From Cuba

Havana, May 28 (INS).—One hundred German-Jewish refugees were denied permission to land here tonight when they arrived aboard the French liner Flandre. They proceeded to Mexico, but it was anticipated they will not be permitted to land there either and will again seek entry into Cuba when the ship returns next week.

Hull Calls Isolation A Delusion; Borah Defends Arms Ban

Clark and Idahoan Map Opposition To Alteration of Neutrality Law

Neutrality law changes yesterday became an outstanding question for the week on Capitol Hill as several Senators renewed their warnings of unyielding opposition to abandonment of the mandatory arms embargo, suggested on Saturday by Secretary of State Hull.

Prospects for a protracted session, upsetting mid-July adjournment plans if the fight reaches the Senate floor, were seen in comment by members of the isolationist bloc, while with their condemnation there was mingled praise from other Capitol Hill sources for the program offered by Hull.

Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, who has insisted this country shall not contribute to "mass murder" by supplying arms to warring nations, declared the Hull proposals would "make an arsenal out of the United States," from which other countries could draw for war supplies.

George Doubts Action

Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, saw "great merit" in several of the Secretary's suggestions, declared a number of them would appeal to the isolation group, but declared repeal of the arms embargo section is "certain to meet with such stubborn opposition in the Senate" as to make action on it impossible within 60 days.

The National Council for Prevention of War declared that the Administration suggestion advanced by Hull would "open the way to a repetition of the same policies which led this country down the road to the World War." It said the plan "would lead to financial entanglement," would not give protection against "war incidents," would render "a settlement by conference less likely," and would "result in another munitions investigation in 1945."

Clark Sees Danger

Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, declared Congress would insist on "mandatory neutrality," asserted the present law had not failed, and saw danger of war for this country in repeal of the embargo clauses.

Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, appealed again for his measure to authorize Congress and the President to designate aggressors and apply embargoes to them, though he saw advantages in the Hull proposals over the present rigid provisions.

Senator Capper, of Kansas, and Vandenberg, Michigan, both Republicans, were opposed to the proposed changes. Capper approved suggestions to keep American ships and individuals out of war zones, but declared his opposition to permitting sale of munitions to warring nations.

Secretary Hull's proposals are scheduled to be considered by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee when it meets Wednesday, and by the House Foreign Affairs Committee on Wednesday or Thursday.

Would Forbid Loans

Indications are that an effort will be made to bring about House passage of neutrality revision as early as possible, leaving action in the Senate to await developments.

The Hull recommendations, in addition to repeal of the embargo provisions, were to bar American ships and American travelers from war zones, forbid loans and credits to belligerents, regulate solicitation and collection of funds here for belligerents, require that title to goods for export to belligerents shall be transferred to the purchaser before shipment, and to continue the Munitions Control Board the sys-

1,000 Alumni Attend High Mass Opening Nine-Day Program

Resplendent in the purple robes of a ceremony 2,000 years old, three bishops walked in stately procession across the Georgetown University campus yesterday morning to open the university's nine-day sesquicentennial celebrations with a pontifical high mass.

Over 1,000 alumni, students and friends of the university watched the academic procession, led by a color guard from the R. O. T. C. bearing the American Flag and the Georgetown blue and gray, walk past the founder's statue and up to the sanctuary in front of the gaily decorated Healy Building.

Behind the faculty in their academic robes of various shades walked the Very Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., rector of the university; Bishop Paul Yu-Pin, vicar apostolic of Nanking, and the officers of the mass. Last came Bishop Thomas A. Emmet, S. J., vicar apostolic of the British West Indies, who celebrated the mass, followed by bearers of his mitre, crozier, book and candles.

Bishop Francis C. Kelley, of Oklahoma City and Tulsa, delivered the sermon, praising John Carroll, founder of the university, as "a lover of America, when to love it was to suffer for it."

Il Duce Reviews 70,000 Women In Military Units

Rome, May 28 (U.P.).—Thousands of men attempted unsuccessfully today to crash through a military cordon and enter Venice Square where Il Duce reviewed 70,000 Italian women and girl scouts.

The ceremony, said by Fascists to be the "greatest assemblage of women of all time," was part of the celebrations marking the twentieth anniversary of Fascism.

The women and girls paraded down the Empire Way and into the square, after which files of soldiers closed around them and barred men from entering. The women's units included nurses who served in Ethiopia and Spain and colonial corps wearing sun helmets and carrying rifles.

Policy Would Lead To Regimentation, Secretary Tells Chicago Audience

International News Service.

Chicago, May 28.—Groups viewing economic isolation as a cure for the Nation's internal troubles and insurance against war are nourishing a "disastrous delusion," Secretary of State Hull declared tonight.

The senior Cabinet officer, regarded as a possibility for the 1940 Democratic Presidential nomination should President Roosevelt choose not to run, selected this stronghold of isolationism to defend his reciprocal trade program.

Referring apparently to the dictator countries, he declared in a half-hour broadcast address before the Chicago Sunday Evening Club that carrying national isolation to its ultimate conclusion would necessitate a readjustment "of such magnitude that it could not possibly be accomplished without far-reaching intervention on the part of Government, with dangerous social effects.

Regimentation a Consequence

"Regimentation in practically every phase of national life would be the inevitable consequence. One needs only to look at the experience of the few countries which have attempted to reorganize themselves on a basis of even partial self-sufficiency to realize what the . . . results of such regimentation would probably be . . .

"Far from facilitating the solution of our domestic problems, a policy of national isolation, or even a movement toward such a policy, would aggravate the very difficulties with which we are now confronted."

He fixed as his objective "the maintenance of the greatest possible individual freedom under law."

Leaders Responsible

Promotion of the reciprocal program, he declared, will serve that end. Hull said:

"Overwhelmingly, men and women in every country yearn today for a peaceful existence . . . War is today an incomparably greater menace to progress than it has ever been in the past. Responsibility without parallel rests therefore upon those national leaders who proclaim their readiness to employ armed force to attain their ends.

"Against this background of troubled world conditions problems of utmost gravity confront us in this country. The true ends of social justice can be achieved only in conditions of individual freedom under law.

"There is no more disastrous illusion than the thought that a policy of national isolation would make it easier for us to solve our domestic problems. The exact reverse is true."

Loss of Markets

Shutting out of imports would necessarily result in the loss of export markets, Hull maintained, with consequent drastic cuts in production by the farm, mining and manufacturing industries, which now dispose of surpluses abroad. He added:

"The result of the whole process would be to lower our standards of living. Readjustment could not possibly be accomplished without far-reaching Government intervention, with dangerous social effects."

Curtailment of exports and imports would create ill-will in countries whom the policy "would deprive of an opportunity to trade with us," Hull said. He declared:

"The isolation policy would therefore necessitate an intensification of our efforts to maintain armed defense, which might become increasingly difficult in proportion as the effects of isolation impaired our economic strength."

Hull insisted the United States must "play our appropriate role as a member of the family of nations."

Food Piped to Buried Miner Who Cries 'O.K.' From Coal Pit

By the Associated Press.

Shenandoah, Pa., May 28.—A 1-inch pipe was driven through a wall of rock and coal today into the subterranean chamber where Robert Galligan, 38-year-old miner, had huddled in darkness since a rock-slide trapped him at 10 a. m. Friday.

"How are you?" haggard and mud-coated rescuers shouted as they shoved the pipe through the few feet remaining to reach the entombed man.

"O. K., how are you?" he yelled back.

Stimulants immediately were forced through the pipe. Through it also air entered the hole in which Galligan took refuge when tons of rock locked him in.

The rescuers worked in relays in a space only 4 feet square. Before the pipe was shoved through, the rescuers heard repeated tappings and at one time heard a voice.

Small charges of dynamite were used periodically to loosen the rock and hasten sinking of the vertical shaft at the foot of Locust Mountain, a mile from Shenandoah.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

HERE COME THE BRITISH

(With a bang-bang.)

God save the King!

Fun is fun, but maybe the saturnalia of vaudeville which has prefaced the King and Queen's visit in the Capital has about worn itself out.

Harlan Miller
. . . cheerio!

I think Their Majesties can count on as warm and dignified a reception as the President and Mrs. Roosevelt would receive on a visit to London—which they've no intention of making.

Uninvited American patriots who at first brooded darkly on storming the Garden Party are now looking around for powerful telescopes.

As eloquently as anyone else, Hamilton Fish, the President's own Republican Congressman, expressed the indignant emotions and democratic ire of the uninvited, blaming it all orthodoxly on Mr. Roosevelt: "The King and Queen aren't the guests of the Nation," he said warmly at a party where the Garden Party was the sole topic, "they're just the guests of the New Deal."

* * * *

Mr. Fish himself (a veteran of the Foreign Affairs Committee) was invited; but he felt that the ranking Republican minority members of all committees should have been asked, too. Who knows?

The First Lady has leaned over backward to keep the whole thing casual. She could not have been much more offhand if the guests were merely a couple of Roosevelt cousins. Did I say merely?

This casualness has at moments given her attitude an illusion of flippancy. She made little jokes at luncheons, with which she'll doubtless amuse the Queen.

Two qualities have contributed greatly to the comical furore. One is the inveterate American weakness for turning cartwheels in front of a parade. The other is the thick sauce of gentle (?) malice which always overlays Washington conversation like a rich Roquefort dressing. To speak without some smart malice is to be thought wishy-washy, dowdy, timid, unfashionable.

* * * *

The Irish have done their bit. Maybe they have something to do with the slightly latent anglophobia in the Capital.

It was Congressman Martin Sweeney of Ohio (he may have a touch of Irish in him) who suggested in a speech in the House that the U. S. Treasury be locked during the visit and that the King walk across the street from the White House and make a down payment on the British debt.

One or the other, Mr. Sweeney, you can't have both.

* * * *

"Remembering the kindness their forbears exhibited for centuries to my ancestors in Ireland," said Mr. Sweeney, "indeed I should be an ingrate if I did not in some way show my gratitude to the reigning rulers of the synthetic British democracy . . . Until they get out of the six counties in Ireland they now hold by military strength alone . . ."

It was the hospitable Mr. Sweeney, too, who suggested that Americans use "Are you there?" and "Cheerio" during the royal visit. Ah, there, Mr. Sweeney!

But fortunately Their Majesties have stanch champions, too. I got some scorching mail rebuking me for calling Her Highness Queen Lizzie . . . This bit of audacity was based on a semiconfidential report from Buckingham Palace that she likes to be called Lizzie by her friends; and I count myself one of them, naturally.

* * * *

I think the King has turned the corner. Americans like him because he is genuinely modest, conscientious and as shy as most of us are at bottom . . . He is much more eager to please than his brother, David, and will make more friends here than David could. I once pursued the Prince of Wales when he was visiting on Long Island, and came to suspect that David's affability wasn't much more than skin deep.

* * * *

When the Roosevelts and the Windsors settle down to look at stamp albums and snapshots of the grandchildren and children, I doubt that there'll be any great talk of statecraft and alliances. Each will be prompted by curiosity to ask a few questions, to obtain if possible a little inside dope, but not much more. Friendship is what they're after, and in this sort of a world friendship is a good thing, for us Americans as for the British.

We're all more concerned about Congressman Sweeney's descendants than about his ancestors.

God save the Queen, too!

Predicts 650,000 Homes Will Be Built In U. S. During 1939

Reports of improved business multiplied yesterday as Governmental and private agencies scanned figures on production and sales from over the country.

Outstanding was the continued gain in construction and lumber activity.

The Forest Service of the Department of Agriculture in a report on non-farm residential building, forecast an increase in lumber consumption of 32,000,000,000 board feet for the 10-year period 1940-49. It estimated 650,000 new home units would be constructed in 1939, a considerable increase over the rate so far this year. The report placed lumber consumption in such residential building at slightly more than 46,000,000,000 broad feet for the 1930-39 decade and estimated that figure would shoot up to 78,000,000,000 board feet in the coming 10 years.

The National Lumber Manufacturers Association, meanwhile, said lumber production in the week ended May 20 was the heaviest for any week so far in 1939. Production in the first 20 weeks of 1939 was 18 per cent above that of the corresponding period of last year, shipments were up 13 per cent and new orders up 14 per cent.

Led by the metals, farm supply, automobile parts, and jewelry industries, dollar sales of wholesalers and manufacturers in all sections of the United States increased 1.3 per cent and 9.4 per cent, respectively, during April, compared with the same month of last year, the Commerce Department reported today.

Wholesale trades reported largest gains in the metals industry, farm supplies, jewelry and optical goods groups which rose about one-fourth. Other notable gains were industrial supplies, 14 per cent; surgical equipment, 14 per cent; chemicals, 13 per cent.

Volume of manufacturers increased by widest margins in motor vehicle parts and iron and steel groups, with a rise of about one-third over the level of a year before.

Exports of aircraft products from the United States totaled $7,456,519 in April, a decline of 3 per cent from the previous month, but an increase of 6 per cent over the same month a year ago, the Department of Commerce said.

In the first quarter of 1939 exports totaled $17,178,750, a 44 per cent increase over the first four months of 1938.

Briggs Strike Conferences to Resume Today

Detroit, May 28 (AP).—Efforts to settle a strike at the Briggs Manufacturing Co. which has resulted in idleness for 70,000 workers are to be renewed tomorrow by James F. Dewey, Federal labor conciliator.

Scheduled tomorrow are conferences between the Briggs management and the United Automobile Workers (C. I. O.), and between the company and Homer Martin and his independent faction of the U. A. W.

W. P. Brown, president of Briggs, and U. A. W.-C. I. O. officials have agreed to a suggestion by the National Labor Relations Board that a consent election be held to decide which group shall be the bargaining agent. Martin's assent, needed to hold the election, has not been forthcoming.

Dinner to Honor Hazen for 50 Years Of Service to D. C.

Melvin C. Hazen, who rose from a clerk's job in the District tax assessor's office to presidency of the Board of Commissioners, will be honored June 28 with a testimonial dinner marking his half century of service in the municipal government.

Robert V. Fleming, president of the Riggs National Bank, will be toastmaster at the banquet in the Mayflower Hotel. Treasurer for the affair is Corcoran Thom, president of the American Security & Trust Co.

On Capitol Hill

Memorial services for two Senators and eight Representatives who have died in the past year will be held in the House chamber at noon tomorrow. Representatives L. Bulwinkle, chairman of the Committee on Memorials, announced yesterday.

BULWINKLE

Addresses will be delivered by Representatives Thomas A. Jenkins, of Ohio, and James P. McCranery, of Pennsylvania. Speaker Bankhead will preside, and other participants in the services will be Dr. James Shera Montgomery, chaplain; John Carter, tenor; the Temple Quartet; South Trimble, clerk of the House; Winfred Kemp, musician, and the Marine Band Orchestra under William F. Santelmann.

Deceased members for whom the services are planned are:

Senators Royal S. Copeland, of New York, and James Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois.

Representatives Charles J. Golden, California; Allard Henry Gasque, South Carolina; Robert Low Bacon, New York; John Joseph Boylan, New York; Stephen Warfield Gambrill, Maryland; William Ben Gravens, Arkansas; John Burwood Daly, Pennsylvania, and Clarence Wyly Turner, Tennessee.

Since the program and list were completed, Representative Bert Lord, of New York, died last Wednesday.

Senator Murray (Democrat), of Montana, said yesterday a "large group" of Senators had assured him they would support legislation designed to keep WPA pay rolls at an average level of 3,000,000 jobs during the next fiscal year.

Among these, he said, were Senators Schwellenback (Democrat), of Washington; Pepper (Democrat), of Florida; Downey (Democrat), of California; Guffey (Democrat), of Pennsylvania; Mead (Democrat), of New York; Lundeen (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota; Schwartz (Democrat), of Wyoming; Wagner (Democrat), of New York; La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, and Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana.

House Warily Prepares for Townsend Vote

Rep. Kennedy Charges Ways, Means Group With 'Shysterism'

House members moved warily last night as they rallied forces for a vote Wednesday on the Townsend old-age pension plan. In this vote was seen political dynamite.

A charge of "shysterism" was hurled at Ways and Means Committee members, because it caused the bill to be put on the House calendar. Representative Martin J. Kennedy, New York Democrat, in a statement last night, accused the committee of insincerity and an attempt to play politics.

With an eye to the 1940 elections in which every House seat will be contested, many legislators frankly admitted they were "on the spot." Some believed sincerely in the principle of the Townsend plan; others were hostile to it but realized there are many Townsendites in their respective districts—perhaps enough to turn the election.

After the House disposes of the Townsend plan probably adversely, the plan of Democratic leaders was to call up far-reaching amendments to the social security act on Thursday and Friday.

Kennedy said:

"Not since I have been in Congress, if ever in the history of the country, has any committee tried to put over a more shameless piece of shysterism and trickery than did the Ways and Means Committee during the past week, when it brought out the utopian Townsend plan.

"There are no adjectives at my command to express my contempt for the action of a group of 'statesmen' in bringing anguish and suffering to more than 8,000,000 persons, who have passed the age of 60 and have been bamboozled with the promise that they would reach the next floor from heaven.

"Instinct, the teaching of our parents, our religions, have taught us that the most contemptible creature alive is he who would pray upon the unfortunate, the kind of person who will give false hope to the cancer invalid, the tubercular sufferer or the paralytic, to unfortunates who, we all know, renew their faith in every quack who promises to alleviate their suffering. Lynching is too good for such persons.

"That is what the Ways and Means Committee and the Rules Committee have said to these unfortunate 8,000,000 persons: Come all ye faithful. Vote for me (chanted to the tune of 'Rock of Ages.')

"It may be good politics, for that is all it is; simply a maneuver to 'sizzle' some Republican members."

And while some Democrats were boasting they were about to put the Republicans on the spot, in Republican circles there was a feeling that some Democrats do not face the Townsend vote with equantity.

The bill as it will be voted upon does not call for the $200 a month so long advocated for the aged. The measure carries the principle of the revolving pension plan under a modified national transaction tax, to provide $50 a month on condition the recipients, all over 60 years of age, spend the money within 30 days after receiving it.

G.O.P. Has Cut State Budgets, Hamilton Says

Points to $100,000,000 Slash; Danaher and Pepper Debate Spending

The Roosevelt Administration's spending and fiscal policies were alternately condemned and defended last night in a Nation-wide radio debate between Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, and Senator Danaher (Republican), of Connecticut, on "Balancing the Federal Budget."

At the same time, the Republican National Committee declared that bucking the Administration's policy of heavy spending, Republican Governors and Legislatures have lopped more than $100,000,000 off their budgets for the next two years.

Marking the end of the party-sponsored national debt week, National Chairman John Hamilton said Republican State administrations were eliminating and consolidating services, reducing pay rolls and tightening up loose administrative agencies to bring budgets into balance.

Talk, Votes Differ

Danaher charged the Federal Government with drawing from banks and insurance companies "the people's money, giving these trusted institutions I. O. U.'s in return, withdrawing capital which would otherwise be available for private investment."

Recalling the President's reaffirmation of the New Deal fiscal policy before the American Retail Federation last week, Danaher declared, "it is reasonable to conclude an unbalanced budget may continue to be unbalanced as part of the program."

Pepper dismissed Republican critics of the New Deal with this observation:

"While the Republican high command, through its publicity department, castigates the New Deal, when they vote on the floor of the Congress, they vote for Federal expenditures with as great a unanimity as do the Democrats."

"All that has happened," Pepper declared in review of Roosevelt's spending, "is that idle capital has been turned to useful purpose by governmental instrumentalities, to the enrichment of the Nation and the employment of the people."

Speaking of the $100,000,000 saving attributed to Republican State administrations, Hamilton said:

"In comparison with the total cost of State government throughout the Nation, the sums saved this year might seem negligible.

"Their importance lies in the fact that at a time when President Roosevelt and the New Deal are encouraging reckless and extravagant public spending, there are men with the courage to wrestle with this problem."

$100,000,000 in Pennsylvania

A summary of Republican economy achievements, as set forth by the committee, said:

New York: A Republican-controlled Legislature trimmed $24,000,000 from the budget of Democratic Gov. Herbert A. Lehman, balanced the 1940 budget and assured a $616,608 surplus.

Pennsylvania: Gov. Arthur H. James' biennium budget calls for total expenditures of $537,058,913, about $100,000,000 less than expenses of the current two-year period.

Connecticut: Gov. Raymond E. Baldwin has balanced the budget without new taxes for the first time in a decade and achieved an estimated $200,000 surplus. Expenditures include $3,250,000 towards retiring a $13,000,000 Democratic deficit.

Ohio: Gov. John W. Bricker has separated 3,000 from the public payrolls, refunded a $20,000,000 State debt, cut $13,000,000 from State maintenance costs and levies no new taxes.

South Dakota: Gov. Harlan J. Bushfield, with the legislature's cooperation, abolished a two-mill property tax levy, saving taxpayers $1,491,794 a year, and cut the cost of State Government $1,000,000 a year.

Canneries Reminded Of Child Labor Ban

Katharine F. Lenroot, chief of the Labor Department's Children's Bureau, ruled last night that the child labor provisions of the wage-hour act applied to canneries, and warned that the law forbade interstate shipment of goods produced in places where children under 16 years of age were employed.

She said the canning of fruits and vegetables was not "agriculture" within the meaning of the law.

McReynolds Resignation May Give Roosevelt Court Majority

By Kirke L. Simpson.

Associated Press Staff Writer

The Supreme Court nears the end of its term with four of nine members sitting by appointment of President Roosevelt and much Capital speculation over whether he may not have a fifth vacancy to fill when the court reconvenes in October.

Even as it is Mr. Roosevelt, since the 1937 Senate battle over his court enlargement proposals, has revised court personnel to an extent equaled only by Presidents Jackson, Lincoln and Benjamin Harrison and exceeded only by Presidents Washington and Taft.

Should whispers of another retirement before the October term opens prove well founded, Franklin Roosevelt would be the only President, except Washington and Taft, to name a majority of the supreme justices.

McReynolds May Retire

The Capital has heard reports that Justice James C. McReynolds may retire some time after the present session ends June 5. Although there is no authoritative indication as to his intentions, the belief is general that he has been weighing the question.

The tremendous and possibly far-reaching influence President Roosevelt has had in reshaping the high court is only one aspect of his judicial selections. He also has named almost half of the circuit judges, through whom most constitutional questions come up to the Supreme Court for final adjudication.

There are 65 circuit justices including the District of Columbia Appeals bench. Mr. Roosevelt has named, as of this date, 31 of those 65. He also has named 57 of 176 sitting district judges, substantially a third.

Favors Younger Blood

In his Circuit, District and Supreme Court selections, the age of aspirants has been increasingly a factor with the President. He has pumped the "younger blood"—for which he called in his judicial reorganization proposals of 1937—into the Federal system from top to bottom in a way to project his influence and viewpoint far beyond his own incumbency, even should he seek a third term.

With a year and a half of his second term remaining, there is little doubt that President Roosevelt will have named a substantial majority of circuit judges and close to half of the Federal district judges by its end. Retirement at 70 is mandatory for those judges, although merely permissive at that age for members of the Supreme Court.

Axis to Redraw Map of World, Gayda Asserts

Is Prerequisite to Economic Parity, Peace, Duce's Editor Says

By Edward J. Kennedy
Associated Press Staff Correspondent.

Rome, May 28.—What Italy and Germany, united and ready for action, want is a sweeping world-wide territorial revision to place them on a basis of economic parity with healthier powers, Virginio Gayda, authoritative Fascist editor, asserted today in an interview.

There can be no hope of peace until they get it, he said.

Gayda, generally regarded as a spokesman for Premier Mussolini and for that reason one of the most widely quoted writers in the world, made it clear that Italy and Germany would not be satisfied merely by winning relatively minor claims such as those on Tunisia and Danzig.

Sets No Time Limit

(For six months' Fascists have clamored for realization of Italy's "aspirations" at France's expense, particularly in Tunisia, French protectorate in North Africa.

(The Free City of Danzig, nominally governed through a League of Nations commissioner but actually under Nazi domination, was taken from Germany after the World War. Germany wants its return but Poland, for whom it is an important port and whose customs administration includes the Free City, insists its status be left unchanged.)

Gayda did not say whether the axis partners would make a formal demand for such revision or how soon they would act to get their demands or in what manner they would go about it.

Axis Needs More Space

He said, however, that the signing of the Italian-German military alliance placed the issue squarely up to Britain and France.

And he said the Italo-German demands for revision "will dominate the history of Europe in coming months."

This earth, he asserted, has enough for all the peoples who live on it and the British and French empires are bulging with men, some lands, unpopulated and abandoned."

Italy and Germany, Gayda said, have not enough space to live on; division of territories is the only solution of the problem; there need be no war to solve it but there can be no peace until it is solved.

That is his view of the world situation today.

Issue Up to Democracies

Gayda, editor of Rome's leading newspaper, Il Gironale d'Italia, received me at my request in his office in Sciarra Palace, looking out on Corso Umberto, the capital's main business street.

Within a moment Gayda, a slim, agile man with a quick mind, was talking rapidly about Italy's rights to more of the world's wealth.

"With the conclusion of their political and military alliance, Italy and Germany have jointly put the problem of a new European order, founded on a more just division of rights, up to Great Britain and France," he said.

"Italy and Germany demand parity, or equivalence, of means, of independent work and of position. This is the general problem of the repartition of colonies which marks the present historic moment of European history.

Want "Superfluous" Land

"This does not mean a solution of this problem must necessarily bring war. Great Britain and France, with stationary populations, have colonial territories vital to them and also superfluous ones. This is so true that many territories capable of greater productivity remain unpopulated and are abandoned.

"Italy and Germany, with growing populations, on the other hand, need new territories for their people. The conflict then is not between two spheres of vital interests but between the vital need of Italy and Germany for territory and a regime of superfluous territories of Great Britain and France.

"This is the great general problem which will dominate the history of Europe in coming months.

Insists on Right of Parity

"The problems of Tunisia, Suez and Jibuti, although important, are minor problems. They concern among other things the obligation of France to give Italy compensations pledged in the London pact of 1915 and unpaid up to now and the obligation of France to recognize the rights of Italian citizens in Tunisia.

"Italy insists that the problems of Tunisia, Jibuti and Suez be solved, but she intends that the more general right to parity or colonial equivalence be considered with serious attention.

"The claims Italy has already voiced against France are not directed toward increasing her living standard but are absolutely necessary to permit Italy, with her teeming and ever-increasing population, to live.

Rabbit's Foot Charm Gives Quints Biggest Birthday Thrill

By Canadian Press

Callander, Ontario, May 28.—Gifts and greetings showered down upon the Dionne quintuplets on their fifth birthday today, but none thrilled them so much as a neatly wrapped rabbit's foot sent by an American well-wisher.

The good-luck charm was among 1,600 birthday cards and hundreds of parcel post packages received from all parts of the world and left at their door by a puffing postman.

The rabbit's foot came from Alameda, Calif., and bore a card with the inscription "This should bring you luck." The quints' nurse had to explain its meaning, but when they caught on their cherubic faces beamed.

Special mail service was necessary to deliver the flood of parcels, cards and letters. The bulk of the mail came from the United States.

Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, who has attended the quints since their birth, said his charges reached their fifth milestone "happier and sturdier than they have ever been."

To celebrate the event the girls—Emilie, Yvonne, Cecile, Marie and Annette—played hostesses to their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Oliva Dionne, and their seven brothers and sisters.

There was a big angel food cake bearing five tiny candles—one each for the sisters to blow out.

Fifteen dozen handkerchiefs arrived and were put away with the six dozen which came yesterday.

The girls were deeply touched when their nurses explained that another little girl, also 5 and a bedridden cripple, was the sender of five handpainted cards.

Kuhn Opposes Roosevelt, Dewey

Grafton, Wis., May 28 (U.P.).—Fritz Kuhn, national leader of the German-American Bund, told interviewers today he believed President Roosevelt might run for a third term, but said, "We don't hope" he will be re-elected.

Kuhn, who was arrested Thursday in New York City on charges of stealing Bund funds, said he also hoped District Attorney Dewey of New York would not be elected President.

George Froboese, Midwest director of the Bund, asserted:

"We are against the Roosevelt Administration because it is under the influence of Jews."

Nazis Ban Broadcast of Church Rites

Sale of Bibles and Religious Tracts Also Curbed

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, May 28.—Devout Protestants and Catholics listened in vain today for Whitsunday religious programs on the air.

Inquiry disclosed that Germany has banned radio broadcasts of religious services and that the Nazi government also is putting a curb on the sale of Bibles and church tracts.

Orders such as the radio ban are not published, but are transmitted secretly by the propaganda ministry to the government broadcasting administration. Examination of radio programs for the past four weeks indicated that radio sermons had disappeared unannounced, possibly months ago.

Deaf to Appeals

The radio, it was explained, is a government institution and the government is not a "confessional" or church body.

Church officials have urged that the broadcasts be resumed for the benefit of invalids and those who live far from churches but their requests have found official ears deaf.

A new order of the Reich's literary chamber, an adjunct of the propaganda ministry, provides that Bibles and religious tracts may be put on display only in confessional book stores. In general book stores, Bibles may be sold only when specifically ordered.

There are few stores devoted solely to the sale of religious literature in Germany.

No Bible Subsidies

A further order by the chamber provides that Bible or tract societies no longer may subsidize book publishers but that all such publications must pay for themselves.

Reports reaching officials of the Protestant Confessional Synod also indicate that the state has declined to pay its customary subsidies to a considerable number of Lutheran and Evangelical ministers who have not wholeheartedly embraced Naziism.

O'Mahoney Sets Banking Inquiry For Next Fall

Zweng said he came East two weeks ago at Smith's request and checked the weather in the New York Weather Bureau. He said Saturday was the first suitable day for a takeoff and he notified Smith, warning him to stop in Newfoundland if he found skies overcast.

U.S.S. Brooklyn Comes and Goes As Wives Wait

New York, May 28 (INS).—The U. S. S. Brooklyn, 2-year-old cruiser, is as unpredictable as a Dionne curtsy . . . which is why the wives of the officers may sit out in California for a long, long time, waiting for their spouses.

It's been that way with the Brooklyn since she was put into commission.

She was first ordered away, then brought back for repairs. During February, March and April of this year, she went on maneuvers, returned and was told to prepare to go to the Pacific Coast.

These orders were revoked and she was assigned here for the opening of the World's Fair. Back to the Brooklyn Navy Yard went the Brooklyn, with orders to sail shortly for Panama and the Pacific Coast.

Last week she was all provisioned as the wives packed and started West. She was ordered to the scene of the Squalus disaster.

Tonight the Brooklyn is back at the yard and the orders to proceed to the West Coast have not yet been received.

Mount Vernon Seminary Girls Hear Sermon

The Rev. Mr. Armstrong Advises Continuance Of School Regime

The Rev. J. Gillespie Armstrong, of Christ Church, Georgetown, yesterday preached the baccalaureate sermon at Mount Vernon Seminary, urging the girls to continue in after life the excellent regime by which their minds, bodies and spirits had been developed at the school.

The service, which was held in the Elizabeth Somers Chapel, followed a memorial service for Miss Jean Dean Cole, former head mistress of the seminary, Saturday morning.

The Mount Vernon Seminary choir, which sang at the service yesterday, also will provide the music at the graduating exercises for the preparatory school of the seminary this afternoon, when George W. Lloyd, president of the seminary, will give diplomas to 26 members of the fourth form.

Among them will be five Washington girls, Ann Barr, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Barr; Agnes Miller Birney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. S. Birney; Nancy Ellicott Davis, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Hugh I. Davis; Margaret Ann Swartzell, daughter of Mrs. John N. Swartzell, and Gladys Marie Watkins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Law Watkins.

Commencement exercises for the college seniors will be held Wednesday morning, with Dr. Virginia C. Gildersleeve, dean of Barnard College, New York, delivering the address.

Doughton Puts Tax Revision Ahead

In general, the Morgenthau program was viewed as in conformity with ideas discussed for some weeks by members of the Senate and House, including Chairman Pat Harrison of the Finance Committee, as measures desirable for the stimulation of business recovery. They contemplate, in addition to the tax exemption phases, elimination of the remnant of the controversial undistributed profits tax, revision of the capital-stock and excess-profits tax, amendment of present law to permit corporations to carry over business losses against profits for more than one year, increase in the present limit of $2,000 allowed on capital losses in excess of capital gains, as well as re-enactment of existing "nuisance" excise taxes on which the Treasury depends for about $400,000,000 of revenue annually.

Cooper pointed out yesterday that a primary objective of the legislation was to continue the excise taxes before they expire, under terms of present law, on June 30. Unless the legislation is completed by that date, he explained, revenue will be lost because such taxes cannot be levied retroactively.

To Follow Program

Senator George, conservative member of the Senate Finance Committee, regarded the Morgenthau proposals for removal of tax "irritants" as "constructive as far as they go." He forecast that Congress would rather closely follow the program as outlined, rather than risking delay by attempts to make it more extensive.

President Roosevelt, months ago, recommended that Congress remove the tax exemption on income from Federal, State and city bonds and on salaries of employes of the various governments. The latter part of the program already has been carried out, subjecting salaries to the income tax.

There have been official estimates that removal of the securities exemption would bring the Federal Treasury some $300,000,000 a year, but Morgenthau's opposition to the exemption on Saturday was based on fact that large incomes that should be "taking normal business risks" were tied up in the securities.

With Morgenthau's testimony as the basis, the Ways and Means subcommittee will continue hearings today in an effort to complete receiving testimony this week. George M. Morris, chairman of the committee on finance of the American Bar Association, and Mitchell B. Carroll, of New York, representing the National Foreign Trade Council, will be heard today. John W. Hanes, Undersecretary of the Treasury, is expected to attend the hearings with Treasury experts, to work with the committee.

3 Shops Come to Take Troops From Spain

commission, and third, a qualified personnel administrator, chosen by competitive examination, in each Government department.

Ordway, who deprecates his own ability as an administrator, has long conceived his function as that of a legal and planning assistant to the new merit system procedure, and has said that the problems ahead are largely administrative, in accomplishing the principles agreed upon by the council, commission and President.

When he accepted the position, in September, 1937, he indicated that his tenure would be ended when the basic philosophy of the executive orders had been accepted.

Ordway's connection with Civil Service affairs will not be ended by his resignation. Always active in the Civil Service Reform League, he is expected to continue to play a prominent part in its activities, at the league's New York headquarters. Furthermore, his appointment to the important advisory council of Personnel Administration is conceded as certain.

The young minority member succeeded Leonard D. White as Republican member of the commission. In his tenure of office he has been noted for unabashed and fearless public attacks on persons and institutions which he opposed and has not hesitated to engage in public tangles with Cabinet and Congress members.

Although he has done more than any other person to disturb the status quo of the hitherto quiet commission, he has been popular not only with his fellow commissioners and staff but with such widely divergent organizations as the Federal employe unions and the Brownlow Government regulation group.

Federal Workers To Get Holiday For Royal Visit

Nearby 100,000 Federal employes will receive a four-hour holiday June 8, when the Capital welcomes King George and Queen Elizabeth, under arrangements to be completed this week.

President Roosevelt has requested the Budget Bureau to inform heads of Federal agencies and the District Government that he "desires" employes to be excused from duty from 10 a. m. to 2 p. m. a week from Thursday.

A majority of the city's larger stores will be closed until 12:30 p. m., June 8.

Cold Halts Squalus Salvage As Commander Drafts Report

Portsmouth Navy Yard Civilian Employes Also to Describe Work in Fitting Submarine For Cruise; Survivors Furnish Data

By the Associated Press.

Portsmouth, N. H., May 28.—Rear Admiral Cyrus W. Cole said tonight each of the 33 survivors of the sinking of the submarine Squalus had placed in writing for Navy Department files his own version of those last moments when the $4,000,000 submersible sank off the Isles of Shoals with a loss of 26 lives.

Investigators, meanwhile, prepared to compile similar reports from civilian employes at the yard who had worked on the Squalus when she was being conditioned for trial runs.

"The purpose of these written statements," Cole said, "is to get a permanent record of the men's version of the disaster early, before minor events are forgotten. Sometimes these minor events are the key to the solution."

Cole also disclosed that the commanding officer of the Squalus, Lieut. Oliver F. Naquin, was preparing his official report to the Navy Department.

The status of the survivors was reported to be the same as before the ship was commissioned, namely, that they are assigned to duty in the Portsmouth Navy Yard under the same conditions as other naval personnel.

"Usual liberty is granted," the report said, "but they are not being given protracted leave to absent themselves from the vicinity of Portsmouth."

Officials of the yard said that the reports and investigation were "not headed toward a court martial" or other punishment. Rather the reports were being prepared so that the inquiry board from Washington would have some specific facts to work on when it met.

Methodical salvage operations by 61 divers aboard the tug Falcon had replaced the excitement and tension of the rescue period. They are working in overlapping shifts 24 hours a day on the preliminaries of raising the Squalus.

Reports from the Falcon said that divers had cleared away the antenna and other deck obstructions, had closed nearly all valves from the outside, and had pumped air into the dry forward compartments to prevent the pressure from caving in the hulk.

Pontoons were on hand, and will be used to raise the ship after hoisting chains have been attached.

Salvage operations were stopped temporarily tonight. Although it was sultry on the surface, a radio report from the Falcon said that a dozen divers had been recalled because a 20-degree temperature threatened to freeze air lines and made mechanical operation impossible.

Memorial services for the 26 dead seamen were held in six churches here today.

Rulers Speeding To Vancouver

scenery in the known world," 40 miles away.

The royal party had little trouble in reaching Field, which marks the Great Divide, where the flow of the waters of a continent divide and pass eastward to Hudson Bay and the Atlantic, and westward to the Pacific.

But for the corps of newspapermen who missed the pilot train through a mixup the trip from Banff to Field, by bus, was a hair-raising thriller. In the pouring rain the buses raced up and down slippery, serpentine roads, with sheer mountain on one side and sheer precipice on the other.

On entering Field the royal couple entered British Columbia, a province rich in timber, fisheries, agriculture lands, and gold mines. At Field also Their Majesties had to move their watches back one hour for the third time during the trip to Pacific time, three hours behind Washington time.

At Revelstroke, a Scotch Pipers' band and 500 American school children from Wenachee, Wash., were on hand to greet the British sovereigns. So were 8,000 rain-soaked loyal subjects who had patiently waited in the rain for hours to catch a glimpse of their rulers.

King Pilots Train

Trappers and prospectors, railroad workers and miners, apple growers and farmers, smelter workers and laborers, American Indian and East Indian, Chinese and Japanese, British and Scotch, and the entire nearby Ukrainian colony joined in the warm welcome.

Although no stop was scheduled at Revelstoke, the King, wearing hat and raincoat, and the Queen, protected by an umbrella, sloshed for 10 minutes among the throng, chatting with the town's officials.

An extra note was lent the trip out of Banff when King George and Queen Elizabeth stepped into one of the two auxiliary engines during the steep ride between Beavermouth and Stoney Creek.

The Queen stayed for a short time but the King remained to take over the throttle for a few minutes during the upward 13-mile haul of the 12-car royal train.

"Their Majesties seemed to enjoy the experience greatly," the official bulletin announced later.

During the stopover at Banff, carpenters reinforced the upper berth on the Royal Pilot Train occupied by Paul Tasse, 200-pound Ottawa barber, who was brought along to shave His Majesty.

The other night, Barber Tasse's berth gave way and his 200 pounds landed on Frank Powell, a red-haired Londoner, who is hairdresser to the Queen. Powell's yells brought 10 pajama-clad Canadian Mounties on a run from the next car.

"We're very sorry to leave," the Queen was reported to have told Miss S. C. Congdon, white-haired housekeeper of the Banff Spring Hotel, where Their Majesties enjoyed a 36-hour rest from official pomp and formality.

Their Majesties as a parting gift presented Miss Congdon with a platinum vanity case. Hotel Manager Ronald Deyell was also remembered with gold cufflinks.

Just before leaving the Queen stopped to chat with 4-year-old Roberta, daughter of the hotel manager. They got into an intimate conversation about the two princesses back in England.

[As a result of the 5-minute chat, United Press said, busses waiting to take the correspondents to the Banff station were forced to wait, since Their Majesties must always move first, and the correspondents missed the Royal Pilot train, resulting in a wild bus ride to Field.—Editor's note.]

Then, rested and relaxed by their day and a half vacation, the King tanned and the Queen slightly sunburned, they left for the scenic ride to Lake Louise.

Church Plans for King

Hyde Park, N. Y., May 28 (U.P.).—King George VI and Queen Elizabeth will kneel in worship at the little village church of which President Roosevelt is the senior warden when they visit here on Sunday, June 11, it was revealed today.

The royal visitors, with the Chief Executive, Mrs. Roosevelt and others will motor from Hyde Park house to St. James' Episcopal Church, a tiny brown stucco edifice that was built in 1811.

The Rev. Frank R. Wilson, rector, announced the plans at the morning services that were attended by the President. He said every pharishioner would have a ticket of admission which would not, however, be transferable. He explained that some would of necessity be unable to get inside the church but that the State constabulary and the Secret Service had arranged for them to "come quite close to see their majesties."

The church will seat about 200 persons and it was estimated the party of the President and the King and Queen would require 80 of these.

Tarheels Perfect Dance for Royalty

Acheville, N. C., May 28 (U.P.).—A backwoods Tar Heel King and Queen tonight rehearsed their special clog dance which they will demonstrate before King George and Queen Elizabeth at the White House on June 8.

Incidentally, the King was a woman and the Queen a man.

Friedrich Says Nazis Hamper Salvation Army

Other Governments Also Restrict Its Collections, He Says

Government restrictions against the receiving of collections in religious institutions is hampering the progress of Salvation Army work in foreign countries, according to Bruno R. Friedrich, retired commissioner of the organization.

In Germany, as well as in other countries, it has been necessary to close some of the "army" institutions because of the ruling, said the commissioner yesterday as he stopped here to greet colleagues and address several meetings.

The work is progressing in the Scandinavian countries, and is being maintained in some places only through special contributions, pointed out the commissioner, whose record of "army" service dates back to 1887, when he launched his work in Winnipeg, Canada.

Friedrich, who retired in 1932, recollects social service work he performed in the Klondike gold rush in '98, when "not all the prospectors were striking it rich and many had to be tided over their difficulties."

He also had charge of the Salvation Army relief work following the Jamaica earthquake in 1907, organized the work in China, served as territorial commander of the Salvation Army in Punjab, India; Czecho-Slovakia, Germany, Hungary and other lands.

He spoke last night at the Temple Corps Auditorium, 606 E street northwest.

Mrs. Funderburke noted that it was her first time to fish, and her last. Her husband commented, "Next time we go fishing we'll fish in a bowl for goldfish."

Dyke, recounting the experience, said, "There I was still holding two little fish I had for bait—besides Joanne and the fishing tackle, and I didn't drop any of them."

Commissioner Returns to Danzig After Seeing Beck

Free City of Danzig, May 28 (AP). Charles Burckhardt de Reynold, League of Nations commissioner to Danzig, returned today after an absence of several months and found tension increasing in the Free City.

The commissioner came from Warsaw, where he had a long talk yesterday with Polish Foreign Minister Beck. It was understood here that Beck gave him little hope that either Poland or Germany would negotiate for the return of Danzig to Germany at any immediate date.

Uncertainty as to the Free City's future was beginning to tell on the nerves of Danzigers. Within the last two weeks feeling toward Poland has sharpened as a result of almost daily incidents.

Burckhardt, ordered back to his post by the Danzig committee of the League of Nations, was expected to see Dr. Arthur Karl Greiser, president of the Free City Senate, tomorrow or Tuesday.

She Lost FAT Husband Pleased

"I am so happy to get rid of that bulky fat. My husband is very pleased with me. My skin is clearer and I feel so much better since I'm not so heavy on my feet. Friends say I look much better." Mrs. N. Spickler, Maugansville, Md.

If you are overweight, try this easy, sensible way to take off fat. No drastic dieting or strenuous exercise; no harmful drugs. Here's all you do: For the next 4 weeks cut out fat meats, butter, cream and rich pastries and go light on potatoes, rice and sugar. There need never be a hungry moment. You can eat plentifully of lean meats, chicken, fish, salads, green vegetables and fruits. Take one-half a level teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot or cold water every morning, half an hour before breakfast to gently activate liver, bowels and particularly the kidneys—Don't miss a morning. Then weigh yourself again.

A 4-oz. bottle of Kruschen lasts 4 weeks and costs but little. You can get Kruschen made in U. S. A. at any drug store in the world. Adv.

Wreath laying by the Society of the Third Division, A. E. F., at 10 a. m. in Arlington National Cemetery, on the graves of Maj. Gen. Joseph T. Dickman, Third Division commander in France, and Maj. Gen. U. G. Alexander, commander of the Thirty-eighth Infantry.

Services at 10 a. m. in Harmony Cemetery by the James Reese Europe Post, American Legion.

Observances at 8 p. m. by the Bureau of Printing and Engraving Post, American Legion, in the Bureau auditorium.

Brady, department commander, American Legion, over WJSV; by Harlan Wood, past department commander, over WRC; by Dr. Walter O. Hess, department commander, D. A. V., over WMAL, and by Ralph Chambers, vice president of the Memorial Day Corporation, over WOL.

In yesterday's observances, the religious aspect of the memorial period predominated at scores of the city's churches and cemeteries.

In services sponsored by the Lincoln Camp, No. 2, Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War, the Irish War Veterans and the Catholic War Veterans at Mount Olivet Cemetery, Representative Kent E. Keller (Democrat), of Illinois, was the principal speaker. A squad from St. John's College R. O. T. C. ended the ceremonies with three volleys.

Representative John C. Shafer (Republican), of Wisconsin, spoke at the Washington Hebrew Congregation Cemetery under the auspices of the Washington Post, No. 58, and Ladies Auxiliary, Jewish War Veterans.

At services at the tomb of Woodrow Wilson, in the Washington Cathedral, Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, commander of the District National Guard, spoke.

Other services were held by the Woman's Relief Corps, Auxiliary of the G. A. R., on Arlington Memorial Bridge, while the William B. Cushing Camp, Sons of the Union Veterans, marked the day with exercises at the Abbey Mausoleum.

The U. S. S. Jones Post, American Legion, sponsored services near the Argonne Cross in Arlington Cemetery.

Foremost among yesterday's sacred observances was a field mass in the Arlington Amphitheater, held under the auspices of the Knights of Columbus.

Flowers were strewn in the Potomac yesterday morning by the department auxiliary, United Spanish War Veterans. The Gen. Nelson A. Miles Post of the same organization held services at St. Elizabeths.

Other organizations marking the day were the Richard G. Harden Camp and the Warren G. Harding Camp, Sons of Union Veterans; the Kenneth H. Nash Post, the James E. Walker Post, the Stephen P. McGroarty Post, the Virginia State Council, Daughters of America; the Jane A. Delano Post, Charles M. T. Salutes were fired over the graves of veterans yesterday morning by the Headquarters Company, Second Battalion, First Infantry, in four cemeteries in and near Laurel, Md. They were St. Phillip's Episcopal Cemetery, St. Mary's Catholic Cemetery, Savage Cemetery, and St. John's Cemetery in Beltsville.

A poppy was laid by each grave by the American Legion, and at each cemetery a large wreath was laid in memory of all the veterans.

At 3 p. m. the American Legion, the Sons and Daughters of the American Legion, and the Headquarters Company held services in Ivy Hill Cemetery. Capt. Vinton D. Cockey, chaplain of Headquarters Company, said the invocation and prayers and salutes were fired.

At the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier tomorrow wreaths will be laid by the Alexandria Unit, American Legion Auxiliary; the Military Attache of the French Embassy, the Yankee Division and Maj. Gen. C. R. Edwards Post, American Legion; Col. James O. Sheppard, former Lieutenant Governor of South Carolina; l'Union Alsacienne, Hungarian Federation and the American Gold Star Mothers. There also will be 12 other wreath-laying ceremonies at Grand Army of the Republic services.

Other organizations holding services tomorrow are:

The United Spanish War Veterans, at 9 a. m. at the National Cemetery, United States Soldiers' Home.

Disabled American Veterans of the World War, at 12:30 p. m. at the Canadian Cross in Arlington.

Georgetown University Law School, at the law library at 10 a. m.

The huge parade will start promptly at 9:45 a. m. at Ninth street and Constitution avenue.

Led by Police Superintendent Maj. Brown and the parade's grand marshal, District National Guard Commander Brig. Gen. Cox, the first division columns will be made up of Cavalry, Field Artillery, mounted machine gun troops, bluejackets, Marines and bands from the three military branches.

British Laborite Sees Draft As Blow to Nation's Defense

Spokesman Says Party Fears Raising Of Continental Army Will Be Accomplished At Expense of Sea Power, Industrial Forces

By Noel Baker,
British Labor Party Leader.
By Wireless and Special Wire to The Post.

London, May 28.—It is the purpose of this article to explain why the Labor Party and many other people in Great Britain—and particularly those who most desire to stand against aggression—have believed conscription to be unnecessary and wrong.

First, we believe adoption of conscription cannot help Great Britain to meet the urgent danger with which we are confronted now.

The conscription bill was rushed through the House of Commons in order to impress Hitler before his Reichstag speech. Yet it is evident that for a year, at least, the building of the machinery of a conscript army must divert attention from other efforts which will give Great Britain a more immediate return.

Second, we believe that even as a long-term policy conscription for Great Britain is a mistake, in time of peace and in time of war.

It is plain that in time of peace conscription can never be for Great Britain, as it is for other countries, the basis on which the whole system of her national defense is built.

It can never supply the manpower for the Navy. Its efficiency can only be maintained by a long-term professional force.

The same is true of the Royal Air Force, and of the standing army. The primary function of the army is to police the empire. The officers and men must be ready to do long terms of service in India and in other countries overseas. Conscripts cannot fill the bill.

Is it sound as a long-term policy of preparation for major war? Some leading experts do not think so. They argue that Britain's first duty is to hold the seas. In the last war it was hungry stomachs and not the offensives of the Somme or Passchendael and Vimy that brought the Germans to their knees. To hold the seas Great Britain must not only have a vast navy constantly at sea but must have a vast air force as well.

In these two spheres we in Great Britain must make the maximum effort of which we are capable. Can we add a third major effort, a continental army of the kind which would result from general conscription? Capt. Liddell Hart is certain that we cannot and that we should not try.

The Labor Party believes that British industrial power could not successively sustain the fearful strain of the triple effort of supplying arms and amunition to the navy, to the air force to an army on the continental scale.

Third, we are certain we can now find by the voluntary system as large an army as we can possibly supply. In spite of Goebbel's propaganda about the decadence of the British, the voluntary system has not failed to find recruits.

The Navy and its reserves are full. The air force is full. The Army is almost up to strength. The government has only just begun a serious appeal for the territorial army—the expeditionary force of 32 divisions which they plan to send abroad. But already great numbers of units have completed the enlistment of reserves.

WPA Worker Held In Woman's Death

Dixon, Ill., May 28 (AP).—Russell A. Gehant, 21, WPA worker, today was charged with slaying Mollie Tague, 67, a well-to-do spinster, who was found beaten to death in her home last night.

Sheriff Gilbert Finch said Gehant admitted he criminally assaulted the woman and struck her with his fists, but denied he killed her. Finch said the woman's skull had been fractured with a hammer.

Ex-Czech General Sees Trouble for Hitler in Moravia

Warsaw, May 28 (AP).—A general in the former Czech army, who came here after fleeing from Prague, predicted today that Germany would have trouble in the protectorate of Moravia in the event of a German-Polish war.

The general, Lev Prjala, former delegate of Czecho-Slovakia to Ruthenia, declared in an interview: "Anti-German feeling in Moravia increases hourly."

Zanuck "Pulls Fast One" With "Young Mr. Lincoln"

Beats the Field to Screen in New 'Cycle;' Premiere in Springfield, Ill., Tomorrow; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

THE MOTION-PICTURE INDUSTRY'S most important observance of Memorial Day will be signalized by the world premiere of "Young Mr. Lincoln" at the Fox-Lincoln Theater, in Springfield, Ill., tomorrow night. The Legislature of the State of Illinois and the city of Springfield have co-operated with Twentieth Century-Fox to make this event one of the most notable of its kind ever held in the State.

BELL

At the premiere the State will be represented by Lieutenant-Governor John Stelle and a committee of seven State senators and seven representatives. Mayor John W. Kapp, of Springfield, has turned the complete facilities of the municipality over to the film company for the occasion.

Marian Anderson, noted American contralto—who will sing for the King and Queen at the White House—will strike the keynote of the premiere when she sings "America" as the opening number of the Nation-wide broadcast which will be an outstanding feature of the long list of events scheduled to honor the first public showing of the picture. On the radio program with Miss Anderson, who will sing a group of appropriate songs, will be Lowell Thomas, who will act as master of ceremonies; Alice Brady, Arleen Whelan and Eddie Collins, who have roles in "Young Mr. Lincoln," and Binnie Barnes and Cesar Romero. The broadcast will be carried over 72 stations.

The Washington drama desks, with one exception, are leaving this morning for New York to pick up their reservations on a special train from New York City that will carry more than 100 newspaper, magazine and syndicate writers and photographers to Springfield for the event. Similar contingents are converging on Springfield from all points of the compass. The visitors will be guests at a civic luncheon given by the Mid-Day Luncheon Club of Springfield. Following the luncheon, the guests will be taken on a tour of the points of historical interest, including Lincoln's Memorial and Lincoln's Springfield home. The special train conveying the Eastern group will leave Springfield Wednesday noon, arriving back in New York on Thursday.

All of this adds up to another of those stupendous exploitation stunts concerning which we wrote at some length in a recent column. It is Twentieth Century-Fox's answer to the Warner Brothers' elaborate ballyhoo attending the premiere of "Dodge City"; to Paramount for its red fire over "Union Pacific" and Republic for the effulgence of its first showing of "Man of Conquest," in Houston, Tex.

It must be costing a prodigious sum of money, but from all advance information, "Young Mr. Lincoln" ought to justify it at the box-office, following its general release to the public.

"Young Mr. Lincoln," precisely as its title indicates, deals with Lincoln's early young manhood in Illinois, before he became a National figure. Henry Fonda is starred in the title role, with Alice Brady, Marjorie Weaver, Arleen Whelan, Eddie Collins, Pauline Moore, Richard Cromwell, Donald Meek, Eddie Quinlan, Spencer Charters and Ward Bond prominent in the support. The eminently competent John Ford was the director of the original play by Lamar Trotti. You will be hearing a great deal more about this picture as time goes on.

The production and release of "Young Mr. Lincoln," ahead of all the other companies who have similar projects up their sleeves, is in the nature of a coup de something or other on the part of Darryl F. Zanuck, in charge of Twentieth Century-Fox production. One suspects that Mr. Zanuck's chief anxiety was to anticipate the Playwrights' Producing Company and their forthcoming picturization of "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," a screen version of the stage play, starring Raymond Massey. With all of the prestige of a long Broadway run, the Pulitzer Prize and the tremendously flattering comment it evoked, "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," had it been first on the screen, would have "swallowed the field." Mr. Zanuck has beaten the Playwrights Company to the punch—if his picture has the punch they say it has. That is what is colloquially referred to as "showmanship." Showmanship is something which Mr. Zanuck ain't got nothing else but!

Memorial Day matinees will be held in all of the Warner neighborhood houses—and practically all of the other residential themorrow, beginning at 1 p. m. aters in the District, to boot—to-Special screen features have been booked for the Warner holiday bills.

So now Glen Echo Park is complete in its appeal to the summer trade—the Crystal Pool, a natatorium that ranks second to none south of New York, opened last Saturday, to the huge delight of the waterbugs.

This fresh water pool, with its fine facilities for as many as 2,000 bathers, sand beaches, diving pools and shallow pool for children, is a model of its kind. Punctiliously conducted, under the general supervision of Managing Director Leonard B. Schloss, manned by a full staff of lifeguards and in every respect held to the highest standards of efficiency and excellence, the Crystal Pool insures Glen Echo's place "at the top of the heap" as the National Capital's foremost al fresco amusement center. I could have used a dip in that pool yesterday afternoon myself.

"Confessions of a Nazi Spy" has been passed in its entirety by the British censors, according to cabled confirmation just received by the New York office of Warner Brothers. This is believed to be highly significant, indicating a change in the attitude of the British government which, in past months, has refused permits to several anti-Nazi pictures, giving the impression that outspoken criticism of the present German regime would not be permitted. "Confessions of a Nazi Spy," now on the Earle screen, minces no words. It is vigorously antagonistic to Hitlerism and seems to have no other major purpose than to make that clear. A few cheers and a tiger or two for Britain.

Personal-Lament Note

And Springfield is right out in my neck o' the woods, too.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, May 28.

FASHIONS DEPT.: Elizabeth Hawes, the designer who wrote "Fashion Is Spinach," was invited to address the annual convention of the Milliners Manufacturers Association . . . Miss Hawes never wears a hat—and, so, when the association officials learned of this they informed her that her speech would not be broadcast with the other speeches . . . Two days before the meeting Miss Hawes addressed the students at Pratt Institute and advised against girls wearing hats. Whereupon the Milliners Manufacturing Association telephoned her again—and canceled her invitation to address them.

SPORTS DEPT.: Tallulah Bankhead was introduced to John Gunther, the husky author of "Inside Europe" . . . "I'm in a helluva fix," said Tallulah, "because I think you're a writer, yet you look like a football player" . . . Why should that complicate matters?" Tallulah was asked . . . "Because," she explained, "I don't know whether to be witty—or sexy."

CRIME DEPT.: The editors of William Pelley's Liberation, the Silver Shirt publication, forgot to change one salacious phrase in the current issue . . . As a result, William F. Dodd, jr., son of the former Ambassador to Germany, yesterday delivered a copy of that magazine to the postal authorities—demanding that the publisher and editor be prosecuted for sending scurrilous and obscene matter through the mail.

DRAMA DEPT.: A lady who said that she was Adrianne Allen, wife of Raymond Massey, arrived in Reno on Monday . . . "What's this—Abe Lincoln in Illinois?" she was asked . . . "No," the lady replied. "This is Mrs. Abe Lincoln in Nevada."

EMPLOYMENT DEPT.: P. M., the new evening tabloid, has hired its first employe—John Groth, the cartoonist for Heywood Broun's Nutmeg . . . The officials of this proposed paper have prepared one sample edition . . . This sample newspaper is dated April 25, 1939—and illustrates, in their own set-up, exactly how they would have presented the news of that day.

SOCIAL NOTES: When Lydia Hall, the dancer, visited the Sultan of Johore, some of the socialites there displeased the Sultan by failing to offer the hospitality he felt should have been forthcoming . . . The Sultan, who controls the Johore golf course, penalized the socialite colony in his own peculiar way. He transplanted thick trees—on all the greens of the golf course.

LOCAL NEWS: Representatives of the International Typographical Union, an A. F. of L. affiliate, will meet with representatives of the Newspaper Guild, a C. I. O. affiliate, to try to get at some joint working basis . . . Dashiell Hammett's new book will be called "There Was a Young Man" . . . The widow of Ernst Toller will not attend his funeral. She's in Hollywood now and received her first chance at a job this week—and so Toller's friends prevailed upon her to remain there and stick to her job . . . Eleanor Holm lost her bathing suit just before diving into the Aquacade pool yesterday. She swam and backstroked through the entire show—nude.

DANCE DEPT.: George White has been wearing bedroom slippers in the night clubs . . . White, who once earned $2,000 a week as a dancer, sustained a damaged foot when, for the first time in five years, he essayed fox-trotting on a cafe floor. After two steps, a 6-foot jitterbug landed on his foot.

THEATER DEPT.: Harry Bestry, the theatrical agent, will produce a new show. He has registered the show's title—which will be "Strictly From Hunger." . . . With a title like 'Strictly From Hunger,'" Bestry elated, "imagine those lines at the box office" . . . "Yes," Louis Andres assured him. "Breadlines."

BUSINESS DEPT.: Harry Hansen, the book columnist, reported: "At the annual dinner of the American Booksellers Association, I heard Thomas Mann . . . and, at my table, Whitney Darrow and Joseph Henry Jackson, critic of the San Francisco Chronicle, discuss the ease with which John Steinbeck eluded reporters for two days in New York City swearing his publishers to secrecy" . . . Whether Steinbeck wanted secrecy or not, detailed reports of his visits appeared in this column on April 26 and May 13.

TRAVEL DEPT.: The climax of the movie, "Union Pacific," shows the gold spike being driven, thus marking the historic completion of the road . . . At the picture's premiere in Omaha, much ceremony was attached to repeating this famous gold spike episode . . . As a matter of fact, however, when the movie was being filmed—and as it now appears on the screen—the Union Pacific's gold spike was driven into a cross-rail belonging to the located-near-Hollywood Southern Pacific.

'Story of Bell' Resumes Run At Columbia

Ameche and Young Are Costarred; Film Hailed Great

"The Story of Alexander Graham Bell" continues to tell how sound may be sent through a wire as the picture of that name resumes its downtown run at the Columbia this week.

It may be that Don Ameche is not the complete epitome of the man of science, and true it is that romance subjugates the research portions of the story, yet there is enough of the true essence of historical accuracy left in the narrative to make it worth seeing.

Loretta Young is the heart interest, playing the difficult role of the deaf girl whom Bell married. Supporting players are fine and memorable, particularly Charles Coburn, Henry Fonda, Spring Byington and Gene Lockhart, who are father-in-law, scientific assistant, mother-in-law and reliable friend, respectively. Fonda in particular is good, as the man who is just a man and not a genius and must eat.

Mr. Ameche acts with restraint most of the time and then, of a sudden bursts into furious action. He does deliver one ringing speech about how the lone man of science often suffers because there are men stronger and more financially powerful than he.

Accurate are the clothes, customs, speech of the period. Engrossing are the bits about the discovery which was the most important patent in the world in its day.

Pete Smith has a short about the woes of the citrus growers in California. An animated cartoon tells about a barnyard blessed event in which all manner of fantastic things occur. The newsreel has shots of the Squalus disaster with especially clear views of the diving bell.

Trans-Lux

The unfortunate disaster to the U. S. submarine Squalus and the rescue of its survivors are very effectively covered in the newsreels at the Trans-Lux Theater this week. The pictures in the releases used were mostly close-ups and there is a minimum of duplication and repetition.

This also applies to the spectacular and impressive pictures of the tour of England's King and Queen. The current issues touch their visits in Montreal and Ottawa, the King's speech before the Parliament, the dedication of the War Memorial and the Queen's speech there, then Lord Tweedmuir's brilliant garden party.

Another noteworthy subject in the news feature are President Roosevelt's dramatically spoken lines on the budget before the retailers national forum.

The supporting short films are all excellent. "Pilot Boat" is about the boats and men who guide huge ocean liners in and out of New York Harbor; "Swans" is a nature study, and "Snow Falls" a skiing picture. There is a comedy cartoon, one of Disney's best.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, May 28 (INS).—Offhand you wouldn't think that "Coney Island" would be the perfect setting, or title, for a Claude Rains opus — but the honkey-tonk amusement center with its concessions and pink popcorn is just what Jack Warner means in announcing this one for Rains and Pat O'Brien. Tom Reed has whipped up an amusing story about a very rich man who lives near Coney Island but has never visited it until he loses all his money in the crash. But there he finds all the things—love and happiness—that his money never gave him.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Pat plays a barker who befriends him and the cast also features Humphrey Bogart, Gloria Dickson and Marie Wilson. Brynie Foy, who is through being the keeper of the "B's," gets an "A" budget for the production. Now that Coney is opening for the season, he's sending back a camera crew to get all the local color.

David Niven, who takes his pal Loretta Young dining and dancing when he isn't devoting himself completely to English Jacqueline Dyer, will be head man with Loretta in Walter Wanger's "Whose Wife." David's been borrowed from Samuel Goldwyn so much he must be getting dizzy by this time. But even so, dizzy or not, it will come in handy for this part all about a vaudeville magician who is in love with his wife but likes other gals, too. His movie love making with Loretta will probably once again postpone his marriage to Miss Dyer, since I understand these two want to return to London for their honeymoon when—and if they ever do—get married.

Sheila O'Sullivan, Maureen's 19-year-old sister, who has been cutting her dramatic teeth with Ireland's Abbey Players, took a test Saturday that was so good M-G-M has signed her to a contract. What's even more interesting is that, after a small role or two to help her gain camera experience, a part will be specially scripted into the next "Tarzan" picture for her. Well, Tarzan finds a son in his new picture with that very same title—so why not "Tarzan gets a sister-in-law" when Sheila joins the cast?

Ida Lupino, who didn't have half as much fun in New York as she expected to, because she sprained her ankle, won't get a chance at another vacation again very soon. Before she goes to Paramount for "The Light That Failed," with Ronald Colman, she checks in at Twentieth Century-Fox for "Sherlock Holmes," with Alan MBarshall. Of course, this is the sequel to "Hound of the Baskervilles," with Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce again carrying on their sleuthing as Sherlock and Dr. Watson.

Chatter in Hollywood: Del Casino, young New York actor who has been out here for several months, has the inside track for the starring role in Eddie Small's "Life of Rudolph Valentino." However, it's amazing to hear that the script is playing down the Natacha Rambova marriage and making a big thing of his romance with Pola Negri. For my money, Natacha was the real love of Rudy's life. In an interview I had with him years ago he told me that she had the greatest influence on his heart and career of any woman. When Jack Dunn died there was talk that Small would shelve this picture—but apparently nothing is going to sidetrack him from producing it in spite of the tragedies and setbacks that have marked it from the beginning.

The Doug Fairbanks, jrs., gave their first dinner party Saturday night and Herbert Marshall, Lee Russell and the Ronald Colmans were their guests; what are you doing over Decoration Day holiday? Hedy Lamarr and Gene Markey are yachting to Catalina—Spencer Tracy is going fishing; Poor Bob Taylor and Barbara Stanwyck are spending their holiday with real estate agents looking for a house in town; Bill Powell is taking his son to Arrowhead; Vivien Leigh, who has just learned to drive a car, is going to Hollywood Park to watch the nags run—but I'll tell you more about that tomorrow.

That's all for today—see you at the $2 window.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., May 28.—Frances Marion and I have been having more fun with the Motion Picture Guild's presentation on Sunday evenings of old films, from 1895 to 1930. From nickelodeon to art. Starting with Sarah Bernhadt as "Queen Elizabeth," following with Mary Pickford in "The New York Hat" made in 1912, and Lionel Barrymore, looking so young and handsome. And just about the worst acting you've ever seen. Mary, so sincere and natural you could understand perfectly well why she became America's sweetheart.

HOPPER

The Gish sisters, Mack Sennett, Jack Pickford and Mae Marsh were among the extras. It was an original story written, if you please, by our own Anita Loos, who glorified blondes and is still one of Metro's crack writers. You may not know it, but she wrote a daily New York column for one of their big papers when she was 15 and she'd never been near the big city!

And if you're depressed and really want to laugh, ask your theater to run "A Fool There Was," starring Theda Bara in 1914. You don't believe it even while you're looking at it. And supporting her was Mae Allison with the twitchiest eyes that ever winked on a motion picture screen. Not until you get a gander at those oldies do you appreciate and realize the stride we've made in motion pictures.

Some of those who made them, which included Ben Turpin, were there to join in the fun. And many youngsters like John Garfield, Mary Carlisle and Gale Sondegaard were there, too.

Funny that I should hear from Anna C. Nilsson, who's visiting her parents in Sweden, the same day I was offered bargains in houses at Malibu Beach. Anna writes with her left hand because she's broken her right arm and dislocated her shoulder. She took up ice skating in Sweden. You'll remember the difficulty she had with her hip bone. It wouldn't knit. In her early days she dieted so strenuously it took all the calcium out of her system. But our young ones on those diets never seem to think it can happen to them.

Anna was the first to build a house at Malibu Beach on ground leased at a dollar a day. Now they want $225 a foot for that strip of sand, and offer you 34 homes built by our biggest stars, directors and producers, which range in price from $21,500 to $6,000—all built on land they didn't own. And now no longer want, 'cause they're tired of dat old debil sea, and long to raise alfalfa and children!

Bing Crosby's on a diet and when he ordered his luncheon the other day he said, "I want clear soup, boiled fish without butter, dry toast, black coffee. And when you bring it on, come in dancing." The same day in a scene with Linda Ware in "The Star Maker," he blew up in his lines and read this speech in a montone, "You're different. You're going to be a big star. You'll grow up to shine so every one will look at you and twinkle like the stars in the sky. And if I could remember the rest of this blanked-blank speech, I'd keep right on talking."

Paul Muni, while taking his constitutional, passed Bob Hope, who lives near him. Muni turned 'round, came back, stuck out his hand and said, "I'm Paul Muni. You're Hope, aren't you?"

After a few pleasant words he went on his way, leaving Bob standing with the jitters. "Imagine an actor like Muni introducing himself to a comic!" was Bob's comment.

Bob's crack to his golf partner is, "Oh, you're one of those carefree millionaires with my money, eh?"

An extra on the "Hotel for Women" set gasped the first time he saw Elsa Maxwell. "So that's Mr. Zanuck's Maxwell, eh? Looks more like Jack Benny's—Maxwell, to me."

Kay Johnson has a small part in "The Real Glory," but rode to the set in a big limousine. Trailing after her was Gary Cooper, pedaling along on his bike.

Reich Protests Liner Boarding By Japanese

Warship Overhauls Hamburg-American Ship Near Hongkong

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai, May 28.—The German Hamburg-American Line announced today its liner Sauerland had been stopped and boarded by Japanese, and a protest against the action had been made by German diplomatic representatives.

It said the incident, the third involving a European liner, occurred last Wednesday, when the 7,087-ton Sauerland was overhauled by a Japanese warship. The steamer, en route to Hongkong from Singapore, was almost within Hongkong waters when halted.

The boarding party demanded to see the ship's papers and then withdrew.

Germans said the action took place at almost the same time as the stopping and boarding of the British liner Ranpura just outside Hongkong waters.

The British protested against that action and the French subsequently protested, when, on the following day, the French freight and passenger vessel Aramis was stopped by a Japanese destroyer and boarded by armed marines.

Germany and Japan are among the signatories of the anti-Comintern pact, and the Sauerland bears great swastikas painted on both sides, making her nationally easily determined from a great distance.

Eyewitnesses along the coast at the mouth of the Min River, east of Foochow, reported the boarding today by Japanese seamen of a coastal steamer flying the British flag. The ship, the name of which was not learned, was detained five hours.

Reports from that vicinity said the Japanese navy had inaugurated a campaign against Chinese fishermen from the mouth of the River Ho to seek their livelihood.

Eye-witnesses said that in recent days Japanese had turned machine guns upon many small fishing craft, crowded not only with fishermen but also with their wives and children.

U. S. Cruiser Returns

The United States cruiser Marblehead is due here tomorrow from Kulangsu, International Settlement on a small island in the harbor of Amoy, where she steamed from Tsingtao when the crisis arose over Japanese demands for virtual control.

The deadlock between Japan on the one side and Great Britain, France and the United States over the International Settlement issue continued.

Latest reports, however, said the Japanese were indicating they might forego some of their far-reaching demands. Discussions were proceeding.

Chinese pirates roaming the mouth of the Yangtze River in junks equipped with machine guns tonight boarded the Portuguese steamer Tejo, near Woosung, a few miles below Shanghai, robbing the passengers and crew.

Foochow, China, May 28 (AP).—Japanese warplanes bombed Foochow twice toda , killing and injuring an undetermined number of inhabitants and adding to the considerable property damage caused by five air raids last Friday.

Reports from Putien, southwest of here, said the American Methodist Mission was the principal sufferer from Thursday's raids on that city by Japanese naval aircraft.

Snite Sees Lourdes Pentecostal Rites

Lourdes, France, May 28 (AP).—Fred B. Snite, jr., "the man in the iron lung," saw the Pentecostal procession of the Blessed Sacrament at the Lourdes shrine amid a group of invalids from Leeds, England.

The Chicago infantile paralysis victim, who made a 5,000-mile pilgrimage here in his mechanical respirator, was one of 10,000 persons who saw the procession, one of the largest pilgrimages held at the shrine this year. More than 2,000 pilgrims took part in the procession itself.

Soviet Regulates Private Gardens

Moscow, May 28 (AP).—A drastic decree aimed at "counterfeit collective farmers" was issued today by Joseph Stalin and Premier Molotoff to restrict rigidly the size of private garden plots.

Unscrupulous collective farm members, the decree said, have been resorting to trickery to increase the size of their individual plots. It said some have devoted their whole time cultivating their ground to the neglect of collective farm community interests.

Buenos Aires Adopts Pedestrian Control

Buenos Aires (By Mail) (AP).—Pedestrians in Buenos Aires are struggling with an innovation in municipal traffic control—"keep to the right" sidewalks.

The mayor has signed a law providing fines or brief jail terms for pedestrians who fail to keep to the right of the sidewalks, who "jaywalk," or who walk in the streets.

Editors Prophesy Defeat of Japan

San Francisco, May 28 (AP).—Headlines in Chinatown declare daily that the days of the Japanese in China are numbered.

The five papers in Chinatown, largest Chinese settlement outside of China, all receive daily cable dispatches and regular mail stories from their own correspondents in Shanghai and Hongkong.

For example a single issue of the Chung Sai Yat Po reported the following:

A successful attack on the Japanese in Kwangtung (Canton) province; the route of several divisions of Japanese in the Yantze Valley; the killing of 20,000 men, largely Japanese, in a battle resulting from Japanese concentrations for an advance on Chungking.

There also were stories of Chinese defeats, and of great destruction by Japanese bombers and mechanized units.

But an editorial on the front page expressed the viewpoint "that "Japan is getting tired—China can't lose."

Bullitt Warns Aggressors May Force War

Joined by Daladier In Homage to U. S. Soldier Dead

By the Associated Press.

Paris, May 28.—Premier Daladier and United States Ambassador Bullitt today expressed hope for peace but cautioned that it may again become necessary to take up arms.

They spoke in the presence of American Legion and French military delegations at the dedication of the semicircular monument of columns erected at the new American Legion Cemetery at Neuilly, a suburb of Paris.

"Let us not forget that there are times when men must take up arms to save all that is worthy in human life and that if arms break peace they also defend it," Bullitt said.

Compared with 1917

Daladier, speaking for France, asserted that "any attempt at hegemony or domination would find her determined to defend her liberty and the liberty of the world."

Their addresses opened a week of memorial exercises for United States World War dead.

France's premier traced a somber comparison between 1917 when, he said, American soldiers came to France "to build a world where peace and justice would finally reign" and the present day when "the brute force they wanted to crush is more menacing than ever."

Has Worked for Peace

To the women of America, who lost sons and husbands on French battlefields, he said, "I recognize their right to ask us what we have made out of so much suffering and so many sacrifices."

For 20 years France "has consecrated all her efforts to peace among men," Daladier said. "But like all free nations she could not allow to be endangered that which seems to her to be more precious than life itself.

"But despite renewed menaces, despite uncertainties of the present hour, this France does not want to abandon hope of saving peace. She has consecrated herself entirely to this work for months and months in magnificent calm and with unfaltering will."

Prevented Fouler World

Bullitt took the same theme of an accounting over the graves of the American war dead for the state of modern Europe.

"The men who lie here," said the Ambassador, "fought in the hope that they might bring lasting peace to earth. Because there is not yet peace in the world it has become the habit of many fellow critics to say that their sacrifice was useless and to add that another World War is inevitable.

"I believe that both these statements are profoundly untrue."

Britain Expected to Reject Japan's Claims on China Ports

By the United Press.

London, May 28.—The British foreign office is preparing a new note to Germany and two stiff notes to Japan, it was learned tonight.

The note to Germany, being prepared in collaboration with admiralty experts, will answer Reichsfuehrer Hitler's note of April 28 which, besides repudiating the Anglo-German naval pact, bitterly attacked British foreign policy. It is not likely to be ready until some time after the pending British-French-Russian mutual aid pact is signed.

The exact tenor of the British answer will depend upon intervening events but, barring unforeseen developments, it probably will assure Germany of Britain's steadfast willingness to reach a general settlement of Europe's problems. It also may offer Germany a nonaggression pact.

British officials, however, disclaimed knowledge of the reported intention of Prime Minister Chamberlain to summon a peace conference soon.

The first note to Japan will reject bluntly Japan's claim to sovereign rights over all foreign settlements in China and will remind Japan of British treaty rights in Chinese ports. The second will refuse to recognize Japan's asserted right to enforce a naval blockade of the China coast.

Admiral Sir Percy Noble, British naval commander in China waters, protested to Japanese authorities at Amoy and Shanghai against the halting and boarding of the British liner Rampura.

By refraining from interfering with United States shipping in China waters while threatening to blockade British and other foreign vessels Japan, it was surmised here, is trying to drive a wedge between Britain and the United States. Spokesmen for both these countries however, have made it clear that their policies in the Far East will remain in harmony.

London, May 28 (AP).—Neville Chambertain today started his third year as prime minister with confidence that by the end of the week he will have lined up Soviet Russia with her vast resources with the British-French front.

Ivan Maisky, Soviet Ambassador to London, was scheduled to return here tomorrow from Geneva and belief was expressed in diplomatic circles he would receive instructions from Moscow within 24 hours to accept Britain's latest proposals for a mutual assistance pact.

It was said there was no doubt that an agreement would be concluded by the time Parliament reconvenes on June 5, as Chamberlain predicted last week.

"We have succeeded in taking a great step for French security," French Foreign Minister Bonnet said before leaving on a brief holiday. "We have virtually reached an agreement with Russia and Britain for an entente."

The Quai D'Orsay said emphatically today there would be no secret clauses to the entente, which would provide:

Britain, France and Russia pledge automatic mutual military aid in the event of direct attack on any of these three nations;

Automatic military co-operation between the three powers in the event one becomes engaged in war in defense of states already guaranteed—including Poland and Rumania;

Political and military co-operation in the event of aggression against any European state not previously guaranteed, but only after consultations.

A Reasonable Request

There is no type of regulatory legislation affecting business that gives rise to sharper differences of opinion than the so-called fair trade practices acts. This misleading name is given to laws legalizing resale price maintenance. Great uncertainty prevails as to the economic desirability of such legislation and the possibility of its effective enforcement. Hence an examination of the results achieved in States where fair trade laws are now in force should be most illuminating.

The Federal Trade Commission has already begun a study of fair trade acts and the Temporary National Economic Committee is considering a survey along the same lines as part of a more comprehensive inquiry into marketing laws. President Roosevelt has, therefore, asked Congress to defer action on the Kennedy fair trade practices bill applicable to the District until these investigations are completed.

It is to be hoped that this eminently reasonable request will not go unheeded. Congress will certainly be able to weigh the merits of the Kennedy bill much more intelligently if it defers action until the FTC and the TNEC have accumulated and analyzed pertinent data concerning the knotty problem of resale price maintenance.

Which Way To Health?

Senator Wagner's national health bill has brought forth a heated controversy before the Senate sub-committee conducting hearings on that measure. On one hand, it is praised as a means of extending social security to the vital field of health. On the other hand, it is denounced as a step toward socialized medicine, which many doctors fear would retard the progress of medical science.

There is little disagreement over the need for more adequate medical care than the people of this country now obtain. The fight centers almost entirely in ways and means of seeking improved health for a greater number of people. Senator Wagner concludes that, since the full blessings of medical science have not been brought within the reach of all, the Government should assume a more definite responsibility for the health of the people. Congress should take health from the list of luxuries, he says, and add it to the list of inalienable rights of citizens.

In pursuit of that objective, Mr. Wagner's bill calls for Federal grants-in-aid which could be drawn upon by co-operating States to promote maternal and child health services, public health work and research; to construct necessary hospitals and health centers; to finance general programs of medical care, and to insure workers against loss of wages in periods of sickness. Details of the program would be worked out by the States themselves, but their plans would be subject to approval by various national agencies before Federal funds would become available. Senator Wagner says he would "make haste slowly" in putting the measure into effect. But his plan calls for an appropriation of $80,000,000 the first year and numerous increases later.

While some of the criticism aimed at the bill has been mere carping, a number of effective points have been made. Speaking for the house of delegates of the American Medical Association, Dr. Morris Fishbein expressed fear that the bill would result in "a sudden vast increase in spending poorly controlled." In the opinion of the Connecticut Medical Society, the bill "fails to safeguard the continued existence of the general practitioner and the basic patient-physician relationship." Other physicians complain that it would commit the Government to providing medical care on a large scale to the general public.

It is persuasively argued, too, that employment lies at the bottom of the problem of medical care. Unemployment, poverty and sickness might be called the misery triplets of modern civilization. The Administration has already gone a long way in trying to ease the burdens of those victimized by this trio. When the existing social security system is more firmly established, Congress will doubtless provide additional safeguards against ill health. But there is a real question as to how far this type of governmental aid can be extended at any one time.

Before acting on the health bill, moreover, Congress ought to ask itself whether greater progress in the fight against sickness cannot be made by a direct attack upon chronic unemployment—the chief cause of neglected health.

Between Two Stools

In approving the present neutrality law Congress acted on the premise that it is dangerous to permit the Executive an unfettered rein in the conduct of foreign relations. Congress also assumed that through its collective will and foresight it could prevent the development of such a situation as had arisen between 1914 and 1917 and which, it was argued, had helped bring us into war.

The results of this policy of curbing the President's authority and legislating for the future have been anything but encouraging. Neither Congress nor the American people feel any more sure than they did in 1937, when the present neutrality law was passed, that this country will remain at peace if war breaks out in Europe. If anything, pessimism on this subject is more widespread now than it was then. That appears to be one important reason why Secretary Hull has recommended to Congress a six-point program for revision of the existing neutrality act.

The Department of State has undoubtedly been dilatory in making known its position on neutrality legislation. Now that he has spoken, however, Secretary Hull's clear-cut suggestions stand out in sharp contrast to the confusion in Congress over this issue.

For many weeks Senate and House committees listened to more less expert testimony on ways and means of keeping the United States out of any possible war. But no satisfactory bill acceptable to a majority has emerged. In this matter of vital concern Congress possesses nothing resembling a collective will. That is why it allowed section 2 of the neutrality act to lapse without so much as discussing whether such action was in the national interest.

With sections 2 eliminated, the President no longer has authority to prohibit American ships from carrying certain kinds of commodities in time of war. During such a period it would continue to be unlawful for Americans to sell arms, munitions and implements of combat. It would be lawful for them, however, to sell cotton, copper, oil, scrap iron, steel and other commodities needed by any nation at war and to ship those commodities in American bottoms. The only restriction on such sales is that they would have to be paid for in cash.

Should there be no action on neutrality at this session, Americans would have almost as much latitude in carrying on commerce with belligerents as they had between 1914 and 1917. Possibly this is wise. But the fact cannot be ignored that the lapse of section 2 came not through the deliberate act of Congress but because Congress could not make up its mind. And if the expiration of section 2 is wise the repeal of the embargo provisions remaining on the statute books would seem to be equally wise.

Certainly the mere prohibition of the sale of arms, munitions and implements of war, as Secretary Hull pointed out, will not of itself keep us at peace. Its effect would be merely to penalize those belligerents whose munitions industries are inadequate to their war needs.

The point is that in curbing the authority of the President in the conduct of foreign affairs, Congress assumed that it is better able to keep the United States out of war than is the Chief Executive. That may be so. But there is not the slightest proof of it from the current attitude of Congress. At a time of great international tensions, it finds itself confused and divided.

New York's Housing Act

New York has become the first State to launch a comprehensive low-rent housing program independent of Federal loans and subsidies.

The measure finally approved by the Legislature at Albany, before its adjournment a week ago, parallels the United States housing act in many respects. But only State and municipal funds will be drawn upon to put it into effect.

Local housing authorities in New York will be able to borrow a total of $150,000,000 from the State during the next two years. These loans may cover the entire cost of low-rent housing projects and may run for as long as 50 years. The United States Housing Authority makes loans for 60 years, but these must not exceed 90 per cent of the total cost of a project.

Municipalities in New York will be required to exempt State-aided housing developments from taxation. In return for that concession, they may obtain subsidies from the State. The rate of these subsidies seems to be left in considerable confusion. While the act permits "annual contributions" of about 3½ per cent of total project costs, approximately equaling the subsidies granted by the USHA, the full allowance of $5,000,000 yearly for this purpose will not be available for five years. Apparently officials will have to choose between smaller annual contributions and delay of some projects until the entire authorization becomes effective.

In one particular, the New York law is less desirable than that under which the USHA is operating. It fails to require the elimination of slum dwellings equivalent to the number of new family units constructed. No doubt that result can be achieved in administration of the act, but a positive and definite link between public housing and slum clearance seems preferable.

The significant thing about the New York law is that one State now feels an obligation to make an attack of its own upon wretched housing conditions. If this example is followed by other States, it will not only minimize the burden of housing subsidies on the Federal Treasury, but will also hasten the day when the existence of several million people in stuffy, insanitary firetraps will be only an unpleasant memory.

Official Tax Advice

Secretary Morgenthau concluded his statement before the Ways and Means Committee with a quotation from an address which he delivered in November, 1937, before the Academy of Political Science in New York. He then said that the "basic need today is to foster the full application of the driving force of private capital. We want to see capital go into the productive channels of private industry. We want to see private business expand."

Then as now, Mr. Morgenthau was impressed with the importance of budget-balancing as an aid to recovery. But in 1937 he called for specific cuts in expenditures in behalf of a "determined movement to balance the budget." Now he merely urges Congress to take "no step which the public may interpret as moving away from the objective of a balanced budget." It follows quite logically that Mr. Morgenthau favors tax revision, but is opposed to any reduction in the Government's total revenue.

The 1937 declaration was followed by the launching of a new pump-priming, budget-balancing program of record proportions. One can only hope that history will not repeat itself, despite indications that circles close to the President are urging increased spending.

The Secretary of the Treasury belongs to that group of official advisers who wish to remove deterrents to private business activity instead of relying upon direct Government action to bring about recovery. With that aim in mind, he suggests the removal or modification of certain taxes that have a psychologically irritating or a positively retarding effect upon investment activity and business expansion.

Evidently he favors, but does not specifically recommend, repeal of the remnant of the tax on undistributed profits and the tax on capital stock and excess profits of corporations. He is also dissatisfied with the present inequitable method of handling corporate gains and losses, although he makes it clear that he does not look for legislative relief at this session.

The suggested methods of readjusting the burden of corporate taxation are undoubtedly sound and easy to effect. More important, however, from the long-range viewpoint are tax reforms designed to remove deterrents to individual risk taking. As tax-exempt securities offer a convenient harborage for incomes subject to heavy surtaxes, Mr. Morgenthau urges passage of legislation forbidding future issuance of such securities. Thereafter, he suggests re-examination of the schedule of surtaxes to determine whether the rates applied to very large incomes are so high as to discourage individuals from taking normal business risks.

No reference is made, however, to another very serious deterrent to investment activity—the taxation of individual capital gains. The taxation of capital gains weakens, and often destroys, the incentive to take risks, since the rewards of successful enterprise are governed by the tax collector. The situation is made worse by the refusal to allow full deductions for capital losses. As stated in a tax study recently published by Brookings Institution, anticipating in most respects the conclusions of the Treasury experts, capital gains and losses ought to be disregarded for purposes of individual income taxation. But if gains are to be taxed, full deductions for losses should at least be allowed.

The Spider Industry

From the Commentator.

Spiderwebs are now being sold—and are making one resourceful Frenchman rich. Pierre Grantaire furnishes spiders for distribution in the wine vaults of the French merchants. His trade is chiefly with the wholesale merchant, who is able to stock a cellar with new, shining, freshly labeled bottles and in three months see them veiled in filmy cobwebs, thus securing the effect of 20 years of storage.

It is a trifling matter to spray the bins with dust, but cobwebs spun from cork to cork reproduce the seal of years of slow mellowing and fruition—that's where M. Grantaire comes in.

He has what he calls a spider room where he raises the little creatures. There are about 4,000 spiders in the room, all raising large families. Then in special nests he keeps at least 10,000 old and young spiders in stock for immediate shipment.

A customer calls or writes: he is a wine merchant from some large city, who says he has just stocked a cellar with some 5-year-old wines.

The owner of the spider farm soon figures out how many of his pets will be needed to cover the merchant's cellar in cobwebs of the finest variety. He selects his spiders, packs them in boxes, and ships them off.

For Roosevelt

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Since the last several months, intelligent and upright people in every land around the globe have been asking themselves: "Does it not appear inevitable that another great war is soon coming? What can be done or said in order to prevent this? Who is in a pivotal position in the world and at the same time has the courage to take the initiative against the recourse to arms?"

Now Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States of America, takes that initiative. What may be the result of his action for the cause of peace in the form of a concrete proposal to Herr Adolph Hitler and Signor Benito Mussolini, respectively heads of the governments of Germany and Italy? Is this initiative effort to avoid war being exerted in vain?

There is one certainty, however, which must be recognized reverently and that is: One man of all the peoples on earth stands up, speaking well the inner voice of mankind which vibrates in every human heart only feebly at times, but irresistibly strongly in quiet hours with God. It seems to be both necessary and desirable that his message should be translated, printed, circulated free, read alone, considered together, and recited everywhere.

I am merely an ordinary Chinese citizen who was in no fitting position to exert any international influence in order that even this war now waged against my home and my country might have been avoided. Nevertheless, may I not, on behalf of all the Chinese like myself, express through your esteemed journal the hearty gratitude and humble appreciation for what President Franklin D. Roosevelt has said and done so far?

Syllogism

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is the firm hope of this writer that Thomas Dewey, the youthful New York prosecutor, is nominated by the Republicans next summer and elected President by the people. Mr. Dewey has a violent complex on jails.

That we Americans are notoriously logical is obvious to all the world. The current syllogism, for example, runs: Good prosecutors make good Presidents; Mr. Dewey is a good prosecutor. Therefore, Mr. Dewey will make a good President. Even the great Aristotle could not match this bit of reasoning.

Coffee

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your issue of May 18, Senor Carlos Torres writes an interesting article about Puerto Rico. But he says that it is the only land under the United States flag where coffee is grown.

This statement might make some adopted son of Hawaii who yearns for statehood admission, see red. The Kona Coast of the big island raises an excellent coffee bean under irrigation. At the 1925 Inter-island Fair a special table was provided in one tent where all and sundry could drink hot coffee.

On Government Spending

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Why pay large sums to emergency councils to settle the question "Why are investments lagging?" For 3 cents anyone can read the answer in he Post of May 23.

No decrease will be made in corporation taxes on capital gains and undivided profits. No decrease will take place in spending for a year—until the New Deal is safely financed into office in 1940. No increase in personal taxes—it might cut off some votes.

Who would risk the small savings of a liftetime to the business which the New Deal dominates?—co-operate is the word they use. Nearly everyone has saved or is saving a little. People would like to invest it—safely. But not with the business of the country under the supervision of H. Hopkins.

The New Deal is scanning the horizon now for the $28,000,000,000 of the people's last reserve—insurance money. They could make fine use of that for 1940 elections. But if Americans want to realize the benefits of the insurance policies they have been paying for many years, they'd better keep it a safe distance from the New Deal control.

No one wants a monopoly in business but a monopoly in Government power is worse than any monopoly business ever put over. This is the line of talk you hear if you ask anyone what would be a safe place to invest $500 or $1,000. They can tell you more satisfactorily than an emergency council can, why investments are lagging.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Reductio ad absurdum" might apply to Dorothy Thompson's article entitled, "Want to Bet On It?" She bases her argument upon a premise which is unsound.

Mr. Roosevelt is not dealing the cards. They are dealt by the people. In 1932 they dealt him a straight flush. He played it to the limit and checked the Nation at the brink of a precipice beneath which swirled the most terrifying maelstrom in American history.

Some of the big fellows, when healed, noticed that the President, while playing that flush, had "tapped" their piles, and that chips had accumulated in front of the little fellows. Whereupon, the song of praise changed; moreover, they commenced monkeying with the cards. And there is nothing more worthless than a "busted flush."

In 1936 the people dealt Mr. Roosevelt a royal flush. The same things happened. We have not had three deals, Miss Thompson. Two, that's all. The people will deal the third in 1940.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Who are the beneficiaries of the huge sums of money voted by Congress for the past six years, ostensibly for priming the public welfare pump, but primarily for political purposes.

Mr. Roosevelt knows that if he changes his policies at this late date, and there is a revival of business, he would be blamed for not having done so before and would lose out in the coming election; or that by continuing his past policies he might pull through.

Industries can distribute the money more economically, put more people to work and pay more taxes than they now do. This answers his question as to how are we going to get out of the mess into which he has brought us, if he changes his policies.

Employment

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In our leading newspaper, the Joplin Globe, published at Joplin, Mo., we are favored with a department captioned "From Other Editors," each Sunday and today's issue had a paragraph from your columns anent the unemployment situation.

I am a widow, 51 years of age, a certified Gregg shorthand teacher, but can I get a school system position? No, I do not have 60 college hours.

I can remember when a man with means found pleasure in having his daughters at home. Now they seem to get more pleasure out of seeing them take a position that had better for the sake of the morals of the country be given to some deserving girl whose father does not have means to support them.

I know homes where both husband and wife are earning, or at least getting handsome salaries while young men and women meet only insults, when they attempt to make application for work.

In the 35 years that I have been interested in Government, I have yet to hear of any Congressman being willing to make any legislation that did not mean a monetary gain for business. But what about humanity? Our young people have a right to expect protection in an economic way from any nation which demands their life in time of war. How unfair the whole thing is. Thanks to you for your contribution.

Graduates And Jobs

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: Here's hoping that your article on the front page of The Post, May 27, entitled "D. C. Graduates Skeptical Over the Chances of Landing Jobs" is not a fair cross-section of the attitude of 1939 college graduates in general. If that is so, many of our colleges and universities must have recently installed a "professor of discouragement."

I doubt seriously if it is a real disadvantage to young men and women getting out of college not to find business and industry waiting for them with open arms. It is true that few jobs are to be had in many fields today; but it is also true that jobs can be made today, and probably to a greater extent than at almost any previous time in American history.

Too many people of the earlier graduating seem to have lost the sense of adventure that makes finding a job incidental to the greater task of finding the way in which each person's life can be used to a maximum to make the world around us a decent place in which to live. If more of us will seek out the things that need to be done toward this end, and then give the best that we've got to doing them, I doubt if there will be any great concern over the lack of jobs for the class of 1939.

For fear of being mistaken for a graduate of the class of '39, I'll add that my class was 1932 when things really did look black.

With best luck to all who believe there is no such thing as a lack of a job when a man seeks the out to find a better way to do things that need to be done, and sets them.

Disabled Veterans

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It seems to me a visit by royalty to Walter Reed Hospital to honor the soldier veterans maimed, blinded, insane and hopelessly crippled, would be in order. I see no mention of it on the royal program.

These hopelessly blighted lives certainly deserve a personal acknowledgment and tribute from Britain's King and Queen.

Decline And Fall

THE ATMOSPHERE of the Faculty Club reeked peace and good will until the social science crowd strolled in. We were sitting in the lounge, Freyling and I and some others. The head of the Latin department, a Greek professor and a couple of instructors of the dead languages were playing bridge. Then Thorndyke—head of the economics faculty—an associate professor of political science, and two of Thorndyke's staff came in the door.

Passing near the bridge table Thorndyke said, "We really oughtn't be fooling around here. I haven't any business taking the time anyway, what with four courses and every damn' sophomore in the college enrolled in 'em. Sometimes I think I'll have a nervous breakdown."

Without another word the bridge game broke up. The four scholars rose from the table, leaving the cards scattered in front of them, and stalked from the club, leaving a wake of icicles behind them.

Freyling saw my mystified look and explained:

"You don't get it," he said, "because you weren't here last year. It's really nothing but a one-act drama, to be repeated endlessly, I fear. Its title is 'The Economists' Revenge.'

"It has to do specifically with Roxy Rivers—you've heard of him—but its roots are further back than that. There's always been a fight here, as you know, between the Ivory Tower faction and the World Today crowd on the faculty. The issue, of course, is the function of a liberal college. Do you teach the lads that there is a depression and that there is some reason to believe that there has been some slight activity in Europe since the Thirty Years' War, as the World Today professors want? Or do you shelter the students from grim reality, steep them in the eternal verities of the Classics and hope that Virgil and Xenophon will fortify them against the unhappy day when they meet the nasty old facts of life off the campus, as the Ivory Tower school prescribes?

"It's been an issue for a long time, headed up in recent years in a feud between the social science faculty and the Latin and Greek departments. Until last year the classicists had it all their own way. The economics department was held down to two professors, starved for funds, space and texts. Students seeking to take courses in the subject were hedged with all sorts of prerequisites and requirements. Such is the tradition of a college founded 'to prepare indigent young men of good morals for the ministry.'

"Last year, however, the tide turned. First of all, a student committee recommended dropping the four-year Latin or two-year Greek entrance requirement, as well as the prescribed freshman course of another year of Latin or Greek. A faculty committee on revamping the curriculum recommended the same thing.

"This blow was almost enough to finish Roxy Rivers. You've missed something by not seeing him. He was fat, had a little mustache, which he sucked with his lower lip, and possessed three loves in life. One was Latin, the second was two desserts with every meal and the third was the spectacles he staged in chapel with the choir which he trained and the organ which he played. Hence by philological reasoning of the students, he acquired the impious name of Roxy. It stuck.

"Roxy was the leader of the Ivory Towerists. He translated his fight into a personal, enduring and bitter battle against the Economics faculty, first out of reasons of principle, and, second, because the sophomore economics class was scheduled at the same time as his sophomore Latin 3 course—Terrence, Plautus and more Virgil.

"When May of last year came around it looked as if Roxy were going to weather the storm. His freshmen signed up to take his Latin 3 for the next year almost to a man. Despite the wickedness of the times, Roxy was convinced the eternal verities would still hold the fort.

"Then came the debacle. One day just before his class was due to begin, he surprised two of his students talking in the hall. As I get the story, one of them was upbraiding the other for being a fool.

"'You should have signed up for Latin 3, you dope,' the one was saying. 'It means a B in this year's course, anyway, and maybe an A. Roxy always tosses good marks out to anybody signing up for his damned Terrence. Then next fall, after this year's marks are out, you trot up to the Registrar, pay three bucks for the privilege of changing courses, and switch to Econ. That's what we're all doing.'

"Roxy, so they tell me, staggered into his classroom. For a few minutes he tried to go on. With cold sweat running over his mustache, he tried to read that salacious trash of Catullus—how does it go? 'Da mi basia mille, Lesbia mea . . .' You know the thing.

"And then the fire siren went off. That's been changed, too, since last year. It wasn't a siren then. It was a long-drawn-out eructation that sounded like a Gargantuan cow in hideous agony, crossed with a Bronx cheer emitted by the biggest and most unutterably vulgar Frankensteinian monster ever conceived by the warped mind of a comic strip artist.

"Ordinarily Roxy could stand it. But that day it was too much for him. With thorns already crowning his fat brow, and his last solace, 'the immortal love lyrics of the tenderest Latin of them all' rudely interrupted by a Brobdingnagian bird, the old Roman cracked.

"He rose in his chair, and with a shriek which could be heard all the way to the Chem Lab, he hurled the Catulli Carmina across the room squarely into another of his prize possessions, a framed picture of the ruins of Pliny's summer villa on Lake Como. Then he collapsed, weeping, on his desk. Doc Brown took him in tow and sent for his family. The latest reports are that he is in an institution, completely wacky."

Fair Enough

Jewish 'Homeland'

IT IS MY BELIEF that most American Jews not only have no interest in Palestine but resent the insinuation inherent in the case that they desire some other homeland than the United States. The agitation of the problem in this country, including representations to the American State Department on behalf of the Palestine community by certain prominent Jews who call themselves leaders, puts other American Jews in a false position, and gives undeserved aid and comfort to a band of Hitlerized American terrorists who allege that all Jews withhold devotion to the land of their birth. Men and women who were born in this country and who are utterly loyal to their native land thus are made to suffer suspicion and other penalties for sentiments of which they are innocent.

Regardless of the legal, political and diplomatic facts of the problem, the American people will not sympathize with an effort to create a homeland for people who are already citizens of other countries, including this one.

Jewish Homeland Is Artificial Creation

AMERICAN Methodists, Baptists and Catholics are content with this as their homeland and, in a simple, direct way, will ask themselves why American Jews should not only want another but call on other nations to guarantee and protect it, instead of fighting out their own problems.

The fact is that comparatively few American Jews are active in this agitation, the vast majority of them being either indifferent to the movement or opposed to it on the ground that it suggests some weakness or division in their own love of the United States.

The so-called Jewish homeland is an artificial creation attempted as the result of a bargain which the British agreed to in violation of another bargain at a time when they would have promised anybody anything to save their lives.

Not The Problem Of American Jews

IT HASN'T WORKED up to now, and the British are in a terrible sweat as they weasel around in the manner of a county court shyster trying to prove that they promised less than they did. But that is their problem, and the problem of the Arabs and some Jews, but not the problem of the American Jews, except those who voluntarily and formally declare themselves in on it.

If those concerned can work it out, that will be fine, but the American people will not commission their government to take any responsibility for the fulfillment of a British promise or the protection of any other homeland than this one, always excepting the mysterious and unexplored possibilities of the Monroe Doctrine.

This document commits us to the job of protecting much British and French property on this side of the water, and protecting certain South American countries from their own folly, should they decide to throw in with a new Spanish Fascist empire under Gen. Franco.

Nazis Hyphenism Popularly Detested

THE HYPHENISM of the Nazis is popularly detested and openly rebuked here, but it is just as reasonable to ask the American Nation to help the Germans recapture Danzig as it is for certain Jews of American nationality to press the Government or people for any official aid for this so-called homeland.

Those Jews who do cherish the idea and the hope of its fulfillment, and want to give their ability and money for it, have a legal right to do so. But there should be some means by which the American who regards this as his only homeland, and resents any suggestion that he wants another, could dissociate himself from the propaganda.

Passenger Safety Shows Increase on Airlines in 1938

Domestic scheduled airlines had but one passenger fatality for each 76,645,172 miles of flying in the last six months of 1938, a Civil Aeronautics Authority survey disclosed yesterday. In the same period in 1937 the lines flew only 15,115,942 miles per passenger fatality.

No pilot was killed on the domestic lines from July to December, 1938. Four passengers died in two accidents.

For all American lines, in domestic and foreign service there were 23 accidents in the six-month period. Forty-one per cent were attributed to personnel errors; 27.61 per cent to plane failures; 9.35 per cent, weather; 17.39 per cent, airport, terrain or water, and 4.35 per cent, undetermined.

Mr. Waltman's Idea

By Ernest K. Lindley

Another Noble Experiment

LAST WEEK was consecrated, by decision of the Republican National Committee, to contemplation of the national debt. The idea sprang from Franklyn Waltman, publicity director for the Republican National Committee, who is the best investment the G. P. O. has made since it signed up Will Hayes as chairman of that committee for the 1920 campaign.

In making the country National-Debt-Week-conscious Mr. Waltman had the assistance of an advisory committee, which included Bruce Barton, well-known advertising broker and Congressman. Exempt the 25 most intelligent members of the House of Representatives, and I would say that Mr. Barton is as smart as any ten of those who are left. It may be only craft prejudice or personal friendship which leads me to rate Frank Waltman higher than Bruce Barton. I knew Waltman when he was still a first-rate newspaperman, while Barton was only a sob-sister in the advertising game, and Waltman and I usually manage to eat lunch at the same table in the National Press Club once or twice a week. Nevertheless, Waltman seems to me to be entitled to full credit for the notable idea of putting the national debt on a footing with strawberries, asparagus and onions as worthy of a week of celebration.

A Salient Point Dodged By G. O. P.

ON SUNDAY and Monday the Waltman National Debt Week scored heavily. The services were begun on Sunday evening in a debate over the air in which Senator Vandenberg of Michigan quoted utterances of Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1932 and 1933 to prove that going into debt would ruin the Federal Government. The Republican publicity on this speech neglected to mention that on the same program a reply to Senator Vandenberg was made by Senator Minton of Indiana, and that afterward the debate was carried forward by two other Democrats and two other Republicans. Nor did the Republican publicity mention that this debate was conducted in the auditorium of the Department of the Interior, by courtesy of Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior in the Roosevelt Administration.

On the following night Mr. Roosevelt himself made the country aware that the Republicans were celebrating National Debt Week by announcing it in the course of his speech to the National Retail Federation—a speech which probably was heard by more voters than were all of the Republican speeches during the entire week consecrated to this subject. To inveigle the opposition into advertising your product is the ultimate triumph of publicity. Mr. Waltman, and his assistant, Bruce Barton, had every reason to feel gratified.

Republicans Help Spending Program

BUT WHILE the Republican publicity on National Debt Week, abetted by the Roosevelt Administration, was spreading across the continent, what was happening in Washington and New York?

(1) With Republican aid, the House adopted the $1,218,666,514 agricultural appropriation bill—containing $338,000,000 in unbudgeted grants to farmers. No Republican proposed new taxation to meet this extraordinary expenditure.

(2) Senator McNary, the Republican leader of the Senate, was so overwhelmed by his contemplation of the national debt that he offered an amendment to the rivers and harbors appropriation bill to provide $22,700,000 for another dam on the Columbia River.

(3) Republicans in the House (and many Democrats, too) were thrown into a state of mind bordering on the jittery by the decision of the House Rules Committee to report without recommendation the Townsend old-age pension plan. This plan provides for the payment of pensions up to $200 a month per person to be financed by a 2 per cent tax on the gross revenue of retail business and a tax of one-half of 1 per cent on the gross revenues of producing, manufacturing, wholesale, and jobbing establishments. A large number, perhaps a majority, of the Republican members of the House were elected last November with the help of the Townsendites.

(4) Federal securities of all kinds stood at, or near, their all-time highs.

Effort Discounted As Noble Experiment

THIS LAST POINT must have been especially perplexing to Frank Waltman, and his assistants, Bruce Barton and Senator Vandenberg. If, in accordance with their recommendation, the Nation had been bestirred to a sense of horror at the dimensions of the national debt, Government obligations should have declined precipitately—toward the levels at which they stood in the regime of Herbert Hoover, when the national debt was only half as large as it is now.

But the bond market remained unimpressed by National Debt Week—or by the imminence of a vote on the Republican-backed Townsend plan. There seems to have been a miscarriage somewhere. To top it off Dr. Gallup made public his latest poll showing that more than 90 per cent of the electorate favors work relief instead of the dole. Yet the only way to put down substantially the Federal outgo is in substituting the dole, or grocery baskets, for work relief.

Maybe, without prejudice against Waltman, Barton, and Vandenberg, National Debt Week will have to be written off as just one more noble experiment.

February Flight Of British Capital To U.S. $7,476,000

By the Associated Press.

The Treasury disclosed yesterday that $7,476,000 was transferred from Great Britain to the United States for purchase of American securities in February, just before the British government imposed an informal ban on similar transactions.

A total of $133,424,000 of foreign capital came to the United States in February, mostly to seek refuge from political tension elsewhere, the Treasury said.

The capital inflow included $118,688,000 of bank deposits, $11,178,000 purchases of American securities, and $6,731,000 purchases of foreign securities owned by Americans, offset by a withdrawal of $3,173,000 of foreign bonds deposited in American brokerage balances.

The Netherlands, which like Britain is a concentration point for wealth of persons other than nationals, was the only large purchaser of American securities, aside from Britain, in February. Dutch purchases amounted to $3,429,000, net.

France, Germany, Canada and Latin America reduced their holdings of United States securities slightly.

Bring Me A Hot Dog, Waiter!

A World's Fair is a wondrous thing—
In praise of it I'll loudly holler.
But, still, it's rather hard to swing
A roast beef sandwich for a dollar.

I marvel at this super fair,
With buildings beautiful and nifty,
But wince when I get dinner there
And get a check that reads two-fifty.

A Perisphere attracts the crowds,
The Trylon is a mighty spire—
It seems to reach into the clouds
But corned beef sandwiches are higher!

The Hall of Science's display
Quite baffles both the brain and eye, sir—
But why can't science find a way
To cut the price of ham on rye, sir?

I'm moved by Constitution Mall
And by that Magna Carta valid,
But this just pins me to the wall—
One-fifty for a chicken salad!

I'm happy as I see the sights,
From Perisphere to loop the loop, ah!
But this my very spirit blights—
One-twenty for two plates of soup, ah!

I murmur "Ah!" I murmur "Oh,"
And yield to all the thrills immense, sir,
But my enthusiam's low
For cheese on rye at 60 cents per.

The marvels of the age I see
In buildings grand with banners flying,
But 40 cents a pot of tea
I've always found a little trying.

"Go get a hamburg!" some may say,
"You'll find 'em cheap and quite tremendous" . . .
But hamburgers don't seem some way
To blend with this fair so stupendous.

Gray Squirrel

He saw me first and sat so still
A statue would have seemed
A mad and rowdy roisterer
Compared to him. He deemed
The 50 feet of maple tree
Between his and my head
Too short for safety, so he froze—
Pretending he was dead.

But there are games that two can play,
So I suspended breath
Till resurrection came for him,
And he abandoned death—
Then quicker than the eye could trace
He left his slender perch,
Ran head first down the maple tree
And scampered up the birch.

He had forgotten I was near,
And judging this a place
Of safety and of quiet,
He washed his morning face,
And scratched an ear and fluffed his tail—
Then went his sky-paved way,
Oblivious that kings will die
And kingdoms fall today!

Poetic Justice

PERHAPS THE BEST way to get after people like Fritz Kuhn and all the other hawkers of a New World at the price of the lives, safety and harmony of part or most of society is to look into their affairs to see whether, maybe, somewhere, they are not common, ordinary law breakers.

Fritz Kuhn was born in Germany, fought in the German army, joined Hitler's revolutionary Nazi party in 1921, participated in Hitler's attempt in 1923 to overthrow the German republic by a putsch of violence, and, when it failed, came to the New World, where he continued to carry on the precepts of his master.

He went first to South America or Mexico, but landed in the United States in 1925 or thereabouts. Until Hitler came into power in 1933 he had to work for a living, as did other Nazi partisans and agents, and it is not remarkable that he gravitated toward the Ford works. The Nazis had great hopes of Mr. Ford, chiefly based upon the Dearborn Independent articles.

BUT AFTER HITLER came to power there was a great contest in this country as to who, among the old Bolsheviks of the true and original Nazis, should be heir to the happy hunting ground of the United States. In their enthusiasm egregious mistakes were made; the policies of the Nazi-intern, back home, were shifted from time to time. And over here some heads rolled in the sand. But Kuhn survived the purges.

Meanwhile he had become an American citizen—the better to eat us with, my dear—and had mapped out his campaign in harmony with the new policy of the Nazis, which was to pose as simon-pure Americans ("America is a republic and not a democracy") and as saviors of the Constitution—from the New Deal, organized labor (especially the C. I. O.), the liberals, the more progressive Republicans—and to make alliances, wherever practical or strategically wise, with the perennial crackpots who have a desire to murder Jews.

He and his associates began work on the German-Americans (without too notable success, thanks to the good sense, loyalty and patriotism of the overwhelming mass of German-Americans and to the hardheadedness of men like Victor Ridder, of the Staats-Zeitung). The Weckruf und Beobachter, a Hitler organ for propaganda, was founded in New York. Kuhn's organizations gave their blessing and support to all movements which were fighting communism, along with the Nazi definition of what communism is: Democracy, anything of even faintly liberal tinge, and including anyone who is opposed to Nazism or has Jewish blood.

HERE, AS IN GERMANY, he and his associates introduced the Storm Troop uniform, with minor variations; the Storm Troop organization—Ordnungs Dienst instead of Sturm Abteilung, O. D., instead of S. A.—and the strong-arm method of political meetings.

Here, as in Nazi Germany, the central and main organization, German-American Bund, has several subsidiary organizations, one being the Deutscher Konsum Verband (German Consumers Association), whose object is to throw the organized Nazi buying power to Nazi members, and to make an economic boycott against all anti-Nazis and all American citizens of Jewish blood.

This weapon, which is powerful, and which ought to be seriously considered, the instrument of the organized economic boycott against political opponents, is supplemented by slanderous whispering campaigns, organized letter-writing campaigns to all newspapers taking an anti-Hitler stand, public attacks on individuals bordering on criminal libel and terroristic threats, mostly in the form of anonymous letters.

Our heroes resurrected George Washington and Benjamin Franklin as their patron saints and preached anti-Semitism under Washington's picture, carefully omitting all mention of Washington's letter to the Hebrew congregation at Newport, with its memorable description of our Constiution as one which "gives to bigotry no sanction and to persecution no encouragement," and spreading abroad an anti-Semitic quotation from Franklin which every Franklin scholar of repute has denounced as a forgery.

THEY ORGANIZED bund camps and youth movements, along the exact pattern of the German organization, displayed the swastika, no longer as the German emblem, but as the "world-wide symbol of all Gentiles," and practiced the Nazi salute as the greeting of all "white" Americans. When they found outspoken opponents among conservative, undeniably white and even Gentile Americans they quickly turned them into Jews, and always refer to them as such. This columnist, for instance, is Mrs. Levy in the Nazi press.

Most of these activities, in this tolerant country, are not prosecutable.

But the type of mind that gravitates to conspiracies to undermine society and welcomes the use of threats, blackmail and lies to promote its ends usually has psychopathic features which encourage contempt for all law. Thousands of revolutionists, posing as "idealists," and even believing it, are only "ersatz" criminals. They are, like many criminals, men and women with a grudge against life, and frustrated egos, border-line paranoiacs, who associate their personal grievances and disappointments with the ills of society itself. Or they are gamblers, soldiers of fortune, full of contempt for human credulity and stupidity, and with a shrewd knowledge of how to exploit them for their own ends.

Dostoevsky has described them magnificiently in his novels. No revolution of society has been accomplished without the aid of gangsters. And the prospect not only of keeping out of jail, but getting, eventually, a medal for gangstering, is extremely appealing.

IF THE German republic had conducted a thoroughgoing investigation into the personal affairs of the men around Hitler and into the source of his early funds a lot of them might be sitting in jail instead of sitting in power. Hitler himself had to liquidate a lot of his old Bolsheviks when they got obstreperous a little later, and some of them went the way of all flesh only because they knew too much.

Why the German republic did not do so is another story, and not to the credit of the German republic. Its officials, for instance, must have known that funds of the army were being diverted to an antirepublican newspaper, But the army under the republic, had a life of its own.

And Stalin was a bank robber as well as a revolutionist. The type of mind that will contemplate a holdup for a cause may also contemplate it for the gang, if the latter is better suited to the times. All students of criminal psychology know that many common criminals regard themselves as individual avengers of social injustice. The rich ones justify law breaking by the good deeds performed with their spoils. Those who operate from the lower depths are, in their minds, merely redistributing wealth.

A MAN LIKE Mr. Deatherage, of the White Camelas, has no hesitancy in testifying that he has murder in his soul. He predicts, with obvious approval even relish, a "wave of suicides," and looks forward to a "rampage" of violence, even while he insists that he must take a "Christian" oath. Too timid and inhibited to undertake a gang warfare against well-to-do Jews, he would gladly participate in a state undertaking for the same end.

There is, therefore, poetic justice in the idea that Herr Kuhn should be indicted, not as an agent of international Nazidom or for organizing boycotts against his fellow citizens for disseminating wholesale libels against racial groups, who, under our libel laws, have no opportunity for recourse to law, but as an ordinary swindler and, like Al Capone, an evader of the income tax.

Our unfortunate experience in having to deal with gangsters seems to suggest the best means we have for dealing with groups who want to destroy the social order. The police of this democracy (and republic) will protect their meetings while, at the same time, examining their accounts.

Reception to Tafts Tendered in Virginia

'Potential Presidential Possibility' Honored by Mr. and Mrs. Ellis, With Politics Away From Party

Over 350 people—Republicans, of course, "cave dwellers," and even a sprinkling of the New Deal element—journeyed to Virginia yesterday for the reception which Mr. and Mrs. Wade Ellis gave in honor of Senator and Mrs. Robert Taft, of Ohio.

Pointing to Senator Taft, one of the guests whispered, "He's a Presidential possibility, isn't he?" Whereupon another replied, with an air of authority, "No, he's a potential Presidential possibility." At any rate, politics had nothing to do with the party, for the Ellises and the Tafts have been friends for many years. Both the host and the honor guest come originally from Cincinnati, and Mr. Ellis served as Attorney General in the Administration of President William Howard Taft, father of the Senator.

The scene at Rippon Lodge, as the Ellis home is called, was a beautiful and summery one. Most of the guests chose to wander about the lawns where the roses, pink and full-blown, lent color. Large tables had been set up outdoors where the guests helped themselves to all kings of good things to eat. Because of the warm weather, ice cream was in high favor, and coffee and punch were also served.

Mrs. Longworth Among Guests

Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, ardent Republican and part-time Cincinnati resident, was here, there and everywhere at the party. She wore a black and white chiffon print, with a black hat to match. Prints were the order of the afternoon at the tea, with nine out of ten of the feminine guests choosing this type of material. Some wore trailing, English type of garden party dresses, but the majority chose street length.

Both Mrs. Ellis and the honor guest were attired in the latter type. The hostess' frock was figured, green and red accents splashed on a background of white chiffon, and with this she wore a broad-brimmed red hat trimmed in navy-blue to match the colors of her dress. Mrs. Taft's print was tailored in type, with a purple and green pattern. A green hat topped off her ensemble.

Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, who was among those assisting, wore a blue and white print and a small white hat, and Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, another of the tea-pourers, was in floor-length figured chiffon with the same material used as trimming on the hat.

Justice Sutherland In Throng

Representative and Mrs. Ralph Church and Representative and Mrs. Phil Ferguson were among the Congressional group who made the long drive for the party. Mrs. Wilbur Hubbard was accompanied by her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. George Maurice Morris. Former Supreme Court Justice George Sutherland and Mrs. Sutherland were being greeted on all sides.

Lady Bradford Leslie had chosen to wear a trailing gown in true British tradition. Others present included Mrs. Alice Nibley Smoot, Mr. and Mrs. Carlos del Mar, Mr. and Mrs. William P. MacCracken—her bright red hat made a spot of color in the throng—Mrs. Ollie James, Mr. and Mrs. Preston McGoodwin, Mrs. Daniel C. Stapleton and her daughter, Miss Stellita Stapleton.

Dr. and Mrs. Charles Stanley Whitaker, Justice and Mrs. Harold Stephens, Mrs. William Borah, who wore her becoming wistaria-colored outfit, with a matching hat; Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Berryman and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Wilber were others among the guests.

Assistants at the party included Mrs. Borah, Mrs. Charles L. McNary, Mrs. William H. King, Mrs. James J. Davis, Mrs. Blair Banister, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Mrs. James M. Beck, Mrs. Wallace Dempsey, Mrs. D. Lawrence Groner, Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mrs. Ernest H. Van Fossan, Mrs. Frank Bone, Mrs. George Barnett, Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes, Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, Mrs. George Thorpe, Mrs. Woodson Houghton and Mrs. William Jennings Price.

Mr. Richardson, Mrs. Bacon Wed

The American Ambassador to Cuba and Mrs. J. Butler Wright have announced the marriage of Mrs. Wright's sister, Mrs. Mary Southerland Bacon, to Edmund Richardson, agricultural economist of New Orleans. The ceremony took place Saturday evening at the embassy in Havana, Dean R. Heber Gooden, of Holy Trinity Cathedral, officiating. Only members of the family and intimate friends were present.

The couple left Havana on Sunday for Miami, and from there will go to Louisiana, where they will make their home.

The bride is a daughter of the late Rear Admiral William H. H. Southerland, U. S. N., who was at one time commander in chief of the Pacific Fleet and took a prominent part in the Spanish-American War. She was first married in 1912 to Louis Bacon, and formerly lived in Beverly Farms, Mass. She spent several months here this winter with her niece, Miss Mary Wright.

The wedding on Saturday was followed by a reception for 50 guests.

Nancy Ordway Entertains for Bridal Couple

Miss Nancy Ordway entertained at an informal supper party last night for Miss Anne Totten and her fiance, George Merrill, of Philadelphia, whose marriage is slated for early in June at St. John's Church. The party was held on the wide lawn of Miss Ordway's home in Georgetown.

Those present were Mr. and Mrs. William Sprague, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Palms, Oliver Gasch, Miss Nancy Woodward, James Marsh, Miss Mary Core and Oliver Pagan.

2 Parties Given For Service Set

Two cocktail parties for members of the service set were given yesterday by Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Bethel W. Simpson and Col. and Mrs. C. L. Tinker.

Col. and Mrs. Tinker entertained about 175 of their friends at their home in Country Club Hills, Va. Mrs. T. W. Blackburn and Mrs. Robert Losey assisted the hostess.

The home of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Simpson on South Joyce street, Alexandria, was the scene of a gathering for about 100 of their friends. The hostess was assisted by her sister, Miss Anais Byrne, and by her young daughter, Mae Simpson. Mrs. Simpson wore a "Cape Cod dress," a floor length India print. Bowls of peonies, foxgloves and Canterbury bells were placed in the drawing and dining rooms.

Golden Wedding Celebrated by Sutherlands

Daughter Gives Tea In Their Honor at Georgetown Home

In a shower of congratulatory telegrams and floral offerings, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Sutherland celebrated their golden wedding anniversary yesterday afternoon when their daughter, Mrs. Sutherland Mayo, gave a large tea in their honor.

The party was held in the regency home of Mrs. Mayo in Georgetown—or rather in the garden, where most of the guests chose to congregate. As Mr. and Mrs. Sutherland entered the garden from the ballroom, Sidney and his orchestra, who were stationed in the shrubbery, broke into the wedding march. The couple danced about on the lawn for a few minutes, and from then on the orchestra concentrated on old-fashioned airs such as "Put on Your Old Gray Bonnet" and others of an earlier vintage.

Mr. and Mrs. Sutherland had ten children, of whom four are now living. Two of her daughters, Mrs. Wallace Dunkel and Mrs. Stanley Harris, were present, with their children. A son, Lieut. Col. Richard K. Sutherland, is in the Philippines, but sent a cable of congratulations.

A big wedding cake, with gold frosting, was set up in the garden, and two enormous vases filled with 50 yellow roses further carried out the golden wedding motiff. Among the guests were Judge and Mrs. Harry Covington, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bell Sweeney, Col. Francis Harrington, Mrs. Benjamin Thaw and Mrs. Pearson Rust, both in black; Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm McConihe, Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Exnicios with their houseguest, Mrs. Rufus Peckham, of New York; Representative Hamilton Fish and Mrs. Wallach Merriam.

Mr. and Mrs. Sutherland came here 49 years ago, shortly after their marriage. The bridegroom studied at George Washington University for a while and then went to Elkins, W. Va., to make his home. From there he was elected to Congress, serving first as Representative and then as Senator.

Their marriage took place at St. Gabriel's Church, the Rev. Louis W. Albert officiating. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a costume of white marquisette over white satin, with a finger tip veil of tulle attached to a wreath of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Eloise Haley, maid of honor, wore a frock of peach marquisette over taffeta of the same shade and a doll's hat of peach-colored and blue flowers. She carried talisman roses. Little Kay Rathgeber, the flower girl, wore a blue net frock and a pink poke bonnet and carried a basket of spring flowers. Raymond McMahon, jr., was best man for his brother. Ushers were Bernard Lucas and John Looney.

The bride attended Notre Dame Academy.

Round of Parties Celebrates Troth Of Mrs. Blair and Arthur Krock

A ROUND of parties in the hunt country over the week-end celebrated the engagement of Mrs. Granger Blair and Arthur Krock, which was recently made known.

The guests were the Undersecretary of the Treasury and Mrs. John Hanes, Keith Officer, of the British Embassy; Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr., Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, Col. R. V. Read, Military Attache of the British Embassy; Harvey Ladew, of Maryland, and Mr. and Mrs. George Sloane, of Warrenton.

Later the entire luncheon party went on to the large dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Sloane for Mrs. Blair and Mr. Krock, who spent the week-end at Whitehall, the Sloane residence.

The most important wedding of the week in the hunt country will be that of Miss Jane Walker Stevenson, of Middleburg, and Robinson McIlvaine, of Washington, which will take place on Saturday afternoon in Emmanuel Episcopal Church, Middleburg, with only the immediate members of their families present on account of illness in Mr. McIlvaine's family.

The bride's grandfather, the Rev. Willima S. Stevenson, of Maryville, Tenn., will perform the ceremony, assisted by the Rev. Campbell D. Mayers, rector of the church. Miss Lucy McIlvaine, sister of the groom, will be Miss Stevenson's maid of honor and only attendant. Mr. McIlvaine is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert McIlvaine, of Downington, Pa. Wife Financed Husband's Medical Education; Now He Wants Divorce in Order to Marry Nurse

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Eight years ago, while working as a stenographer in Pennsylvania, I met and married a man who had just been graduated from college. His family lived in that city and he had been able to complete his education only because he could be a "day student." After marriage, we began to plan our future life. He wanted to continue his education in a famous medical school, and his father and I agreed that, with careful budgeting of our respective salaries, we could finance it.

For four years all three of us struggled, denied ourselves, endured hardships and stuck it out (while longing to be together) until his graduation from medical school, when his dad and I shook hands and said, "We made it." Immediately afterward I obtained work in the city where he was to be an interne for four additional years. I got a room close to the hospital where we could be together when off duty.

We had three and one-half years of heaven and then I noticed a coolness in his manner. He suggested that I room closer to my work—about seven miles across the city. His visits dwindled until finally, now, one month before he completes his internship and goes into practice, he has asked me for a divorce so that he may marry a nurse whom he loves. She has just completed her four years' training at the same hospital.

Both of us are 29 years of age and I have loved him so much during these years and have denied myself so many things for his sake, that I find myself, as a result of that love, again willing to sacrifice everything for his future success and happiness. The nurse is, of course, better educated and can make him happier and more successful than I could. Yet I know that I am sentenced, for the remainder of my life, to the humdrum of office life, alone—as I have been for so many long years, which have taken their toll because of denials and hardships, so that I am no longer attractive.

Should I give him the divorce? Or is there anything I can do to win his love and admiration, so that he will know happiness and success (with me) in his profession? I don't want to appear a martyr, but just wanted you to know that I have put his happiness and success above everything else in life. Can you please help me? TIRED.

When Paths Divide

DEAR TIRED: While moved to deep compassion by your shocking betrayal, I am nevertheless wondering if you are not a little responsible—quite unwittingly, of course—for invoking that desolation, through failing, in marriage, to hitch your wagon to a star as your husband seems to have done. You have, in brief, failed to keep pace with his cultural development, thus making it almost obligatory upon him, I daresay, to look elsewhere for intellectual feminine companionship, which eventually he found, in satisfying measure, with the nurse whose professional interests and aspirations are so closely akin to his.

That you are frozen in a mold of self-imposed limitations is indicated by that sentence in which you say: "Yet I know that I am sentenced, for the remainder of my life, to the humdrum of office life, alone—." If you are content to classify yourself as a dumb beast of burden (figuratively speaking), who expects no better lot in life than that of pacing a treadmill with stoic endurance: if you are so lacking in pioneering intelligence, in vision, initiative and courage, as to make no attempt to push back the horizons of your opportunities, nor to scale new heights of social and professional achievements, then—you must surely admit—you are not a suitable mate for a man who is "going places."

This is not to disparage the valuable contribution you have undoubtedly made to your husband's advancement, but simply by way of clarifying your perspective on things (shall we say?) as they are. It is by way of calling to your attention the unalterable fact that the individual who does not, or cannot, transmute every type of experience into food for personal growth, is a person who will always be going down like a nine-pin before the chance blows of implacable Fate.

As I see it, while you have consistently deprived yourself, in the name of love, for your husband, those deprivations were not altogether altruistically inspired. If you could be entirely honest with yourself, I think you would admit that they were animated by at least some elements of purely selfish calculation—having as its aim your social advancement on the wings of your husband's ambitious strivings, which you were glad to subsidize for what they might prove to be worth to you.

However, if that particular investment has failed to pay the dividends expected, still you have reaped a priceless harvest by the wayside, as, for instance, the "3½ years of heaven," mentioned, and you may yet turn the whole experience to lasting profit in terms of greater wisdom, understanding, self-sufficiency and a determination to place less naive dependency upon others in future, and to proceed with working out an interesting life for yourself on your own initiative and powers.

Nothing I have said is intended to condone your husband's behavior. In accepting your financial aid up to the zero hour and then asking to be released from the marriage, he brands himself as a man without honor; a person, indeed, who is selfish to the core and who probably will be found throughout his life trampling others under on his way to the top. Since he is so devoid of intrinsic fineness as to be willing to exploit others and discard them when their usefulness to him is exhausted; since he has, apparently, neither cared nor known how to keep you abreast of him in his forward march, but has been content to employ you as a stepping stone, I think you may consider yourself well rid of him, and that you should be duly grateful for the fact that you had not given hostages to fortune in the form of children, to further complicate the picture.

In my opinion, there is no planned campaign of any sort which might serve to revive his earlier devotion. I imagine your ways have parted forever; that your respective interests and abilities are fundamentally dissimilar; and that he is unalterably convinced that he has "outgrown you" (as he would probably say). I think you have no choice but to grant him a divorce. The acid test of what sort of man he is will present itself in the matter of financial adjustment. If he owns any vestigal sense of decency, he will insist on refunding the money you spent on his education—in payments as prompt and substantial as he can possibly meet. Whether you should accept such recompense (if offered) is for you to decide. Many women wouldn't, and others would. The sentimentalist and idealist would spurn such repayment; the hardy realist would receive it as her due. M. H.

First Lady's Royal Welcome Dress

The ideal dress for the woman leading an active public life is the blue wool costume that Mrs. Roosevelt will wear next week when she greets the First Lady of the British Empire. The design for the dress, just made by Clarepotter, America's greatest color design expert who was selected to create the costume, shows it to be basically simple yet so pleasingly detailed that it will be suitable for almost any daytime occasion. Clarepotter's sketch of the dress (upper left) brings out the tailored softness of the costume with its pleats, its shirring and its gathered sleeves. At lower right is Clarepotter inspecting the blue wool yardage, which was a gift from wool growers of Australia, Canada, New Zealand and South Africa. At top (right) is a greatly enlarged photograph of the "thermos wool" showing its porous cool weave. This material capitalizes on a unique insulating quality peculiar to virgin wool

World's Fair Provides Advice for Men On How to Increase Strength Through Diet; Talking Skeleton Discourses on Vitamins

AFTER THE FURIOUS agitation about having some kind of dancers to attract Fair visitors, you'd expect every man to make a beeline for the entertainment spots—but, no! They're crowding into the "Hall of Man" and testing their muscles!

According to an inscription over the entrance to the Hall: "Man wonders over the restless sea, the flowing water, the sight of the sky, and forgets that of all wonders man himself is the most wonderful." But once inside the Hall, most men seem to be completely absorbed in the marvelous exhibits by which science explains the human being.

Besides finding out how strong he is, the visitor can take his own pulse, test his lung power, and take a look at the bones in his hand. A "pain man" is a life-size reproduction of the human torso, marked with the 12 spots where pain most frequently occurs. When a button is pressed, a glass chart lights up, showing the probable cause of pain in that area and the organ from which it originates.

Enter: The Vitamines

A talking skeleton with a lecture room manner breaks into speech at intervals to explain that his perfect bones are due to the fact that both he and his mother had plenty of calcium and vitamin D. With such a novel introduction to nutrition, it is not surprising that the nutrition charts, listing the foods essential to health, attract their rightful share of attention.

Among the most fascinating charts is one which estimates the number of calaries required daily by persons engaging in various activties:

OCCUPATION.	CALORIES REQUIRED.
Football player	6,000
Lumberjack	5,000
Woodcutter	4,908
Stonecutter	4,238
Cabinetmaker	3,232
Draftsman	2,380
Cobbler	2,668

Loafer	1,920
Chambermaid	2,475
Laundress	2,419
Seamstress	2,186
Typist	1,640
Idle woman	1,320

Even though your occupation is not listed, one with comparable activity provides a check. Most business men are in the class with the draftsman and use around 2,300 2,300 calories a day—but a lot of them eat 3,000 anyway. And to be quite fair, there are few housewives who actually need more than the approximate 2,500 calories required by the chambermaid. If you are overweight, you have been overestimating your needs.

Mrs. Bloom's Dish Aspic Pot Roast For Hot Weather

By Martha Ellyn.
The Post Food Editor.

MRS. SOL BLOOM, one of Washington's smartest hostesses, has a flair for cleverness in the style of food she serves. A pot roast in aspic, which Mrs. Bloom says is a great specialty at the Hotel Claridge, in London, is one which she serves for a hot-weather dish.

Pot Roast in Aspic

Cook pot roast in the usual manner. Place in casserole with fresh peas and cubed carrots, and pour over all an aspic jelly. To make th easpic, pour ½ cup stock in bowl and sprinkle 2 envelopes of gelatine on 3½ cups of well-seasoned stock. Add the remaining stock, which has been heated and to which has been added 2 tablespoons lemon juice and rind of 1 lemon, ¼ teaspoon paprika, and 1 tablespoon onion juice, if desired. Add 2 egg whites slightly beaten. Stir constantly and boil for five minutes. Cool, strain through double cheesecloth and pour over meat and vegetables. When ready to serve, unmold on platter and garnish with parsley or radish roses and slice for serving.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

GIRL ABOUT TOWN: One of the amusing features of the Fair is the fact that all the young ladies employed in one of the biggest beer parlors are blondes. The product is a Dutch one, and it is firmly implanted in the minds of all gentlemen that every lady in the Low Countries is of that persuasion. This I presume to doubt, but since I have never visited that charming country I am in no position to flatly deny it. In any case, the ladies who bring the gents their brew out at Flushing are all taffy-haired, and are constantly asked to sell girls their klompen, or wooden shoes. They cannot do this, because the clogs belong to the concession, but are glad to tell customers where they can buy them in New York . . .

AMONG THOSE sailing for France the other day were Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks, sr., and to the astonishment of the lady ship reporters, Mrs. F. actually wore a hat—one of the few times during her long and colorful Gotham stay. One of her shipmates was Serge Koussevitsky, who is the deified conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Anyone who has ever sat through a rehearsal of the Boston band has undergone a tremendous emotional experience—and what the men in the orchestra have undergone I prefer not to think.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay.

The Fox and the Grapes

"Of course, I hadn't really expected an invitation to the garden party anyway. I've never been a pusher, or a social climber, or the kind to put myself into the limelight. However, as far as family's concerned, I could go anywhere I wanted if I'd just make the effort. But I'm not that way—none of my people have ever been that way. We just don't care anything about society.

"But the funny part about the whole thing is how such people as Marjorie Chimp can rate an invitation? Why that crowd she runs around with—who are they? A bunch of people just on the fringe. They're simply nobodies!

"And then there's Grace Barnacle. Who is she? Why the Barnacles havn't any real social position here. They aren't accepted by any of the real old society. You never see them at any of the really exclusive functions. And you know another who has an invitation? . . . Ethel Boop! . . . Yes! Why nobody ever heard of the Boops before the New Deal. And they just run around with a set of official fly-by-nighters.

"Now understand I'm not trying to be catty. I really wouldn't want to go—and be caught in all that mob. All I'm trying to say is I just can't figure out on what basis the invitations were issued. Now just tell me this—why should the Sid Mackerels be invited? What do they represent? Why they haven't even got money!

"I think the whole procedure has been very undemocratic, if you ask me. And making all this fuss about royalty! I wouldn't walk across the street to see the King and Queen. Not that I have anything against them personally, understand. You know really I'm a sort of distant cousin of the Queen's . . . Yes! Our families go back to the same line in Scotland . . . Yes, I've got it all in a book at home.

"But the whole point is, this is a democratic country. What I say is they ought to invite representative Americans—people with solid American background. Now I hate to be personal, but take the Skittles. Her old father was just an immigrant who happened to strike oil. And here I had six ancestors in the American Revolution! Yes! And three in the War of 1812!

"Another thing I don't like about this whole thing is all this kowtowing to the British. You know there's an awful lot of that in Washington. Not that I've got anything against the British personally. I'm just as British as anybody. Yes, I can trace back on both sides to William the Conqueror and I had five ancestors at Runnymede. I can show it to you in a book I have at home.

"Another thing, we've always been very British in our way of living—both my mother and my grandmother always had to have their afternoon tea. But it does make me laugh to see so many people who are just upstarts, like the Otis Sappingtons—you know he made all his money in fertilizer—and then all those politicians and labor agitators dressing up and going to a British garden party.

"And then the way people have acted about the invitations—hasn't it been a scream? And those that didn't get invited raising such a furore! Why yesterday I met Louise Crash downtown, and what do you think! She was all worked up because the Mortimer Silos had been invited and she hadn't! Yes, they're invited! . . . Yes, indeed! . . . Well, I don't see how they can either—you know the house is mortgaged to the hilt and he's even borrowed on his life insurance. But anyway they've been invited, and Louise was simply boiling . . . Yes, she was perfectly furious! Can you beat that?"

Fleet Can Stop Any One Foe, Says Leahy

Naval Chief Urges Ship Building to Keep Up With Other Powers

By International News Service.

Admiral William D. Leahy, retiring chief of naval operations, declared last night the fleet, built, building and authorized, possesses the power "to keep any single nation from making an attack in force against the continental United States."

Leahy, in a radio address, revealed the Navy might find difficulty in guarding the Nation's sea frontiers against a combination of nations, but said the high command "indulges in a hope that it would be able to provide a successful defense even against some possible combinations."

The admiral, whom President Roosevelt has designated as his choice for Governor of Puerto Rico, prospective "Gibraltar of the Caribbean," said national defense requires the United States to match foreign powers, ship for ship, in naval construction.

Construction Essential

He declared:

"If foreign nations should make material increases in their naval strength, it is essential that the United States should not fall behind.

"In general, this Government is definitely committed to a policy looking toward limitation and reduction of armaments. It is a simple fact but often overlooked, however, that if a naval power falls one year behind in starting a program of construction, it may count upon being at least one year without the finished product after the enemy nation has it."

Leahy said the daily drills, gunnery and practice maneuvers constantly conducted by the battle fleet from its Pacific Coast bases have put it "in a highly satisfactory condition of readiness." The various types of men-of-war, he said, form a "well balanced, homogeneous fleet."

Battleship the Best

He pronounced the battleship "the supreme embodiment of seapower, least vulnerable against attack, most formidable in offense and capable of withstanding maximum punishment from guns, torpedoes, mines or bombs."

Although regarding the battleship as the fleet's backbone, he said, the high command "pursues the policy of a balanced air arm," and has developed a naval air force conceded by authorities "to lead the world in numbers and efficiency." Leahy added:

"In the recent fleet problem when 550 planes did much night and day flying far out at sea, there was not one casualty to personnel."

Leahy said recently enacted appropriations will help fill the need for Atlantic and Pacific air bases, permitting a start of naval installations this year at Kaneohe Bay, Hawaii; Midway, Johnston and Palmyra islands in the Pacific; Kodiak and Sitka, Alaska; San Juan, Puerto Rico; Pensacola, Fla.; Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, and Tongue Point, Oreg.

Walsh Attacks U. S. Aid to Schools

Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, contended yesterday that pending legislation to give States financial grants for education purposes would lead to Federal domination of the public school system.

Announcing he would file a minority report today on the bill approved by the Senate Education Committee, Walsh declared:

"We cannot undertake to subsidize our public schools out of the Federal Treasury and still leave the schools free of the taint of Federal control.

"The most potent weapon of dictators and revolutionists is the control of schools and the education of youth. The present bill is the opening wedge."

British to Test Bomb Shelters For Concussion

Human 'Guinea Pigs' May Sit in Devices During Bombardment

By the Associated Press.

London, May 25.—British air-raid precautions experts are looking for a way to give their "sardine can" bomproof shelters a wartime tryout with human "guinea pigs" inside.

So far the human element has been lacking from tests on these backyard shelters which the A. R. P. department recently issued to thousands of householders all over the country.

Mainly, the shelters were designed to protect civilians from injury by flying bomb splinters and debris, shown by observations in Spain and China to be the greatest factor in air raid casualties.

Tests carried out by exploding 500-pound bombs as near as 12 feet away have proved their efficiency against splinters and debris, but have left undemonsrated the effect of concussion which an occupant might suffer.

Unwillingness to endanger the life of a human "guinea pig" has led officials so far to carry out their tests for concussion with "mechanical householders." These consist of instruments to register the rise of pressure—the cause of concussion—inside the small iron refuges.

Readings from these instruments are being analyzed by expert physiologists and if the conclusions are favorable, testing authorities probably will call for volunteers to sit inside the shelters while bombs are exploded nearby.

Preliminary results have been interpreted as satisfactory. Technicians estimate an explosion far more severe than might be expected in wartime will produce only a pressure rise of 3 pounds a square inch inside a shelter.

In an emergency, all local A. R. P. services would keep one-third of their establishments as a mobile reserve. When called by the nerve centers, they would send their "flying squads" to aid rescue work in areas more heavily bombed than their own.

A large area embracing London and adjoining territory has been marked out as the "London Region" and split into nine sections.

This area, containing one-quarter of the peace-time population of Great Britain, already is linked up with the central headquarters in western London.

Steve Offers King Sack of Peanuts For His Autograph

Steve Vasilakos, peanut vender to half a dozen Administrations, is willing to swap a sack of his freshest and finest for the autograph of King George VI.

The famous peanut merchant announced his offer yesterday while musing on the pleasant possibility that the British Sovereign, like many Presidents Steve has known, might stroll across the White House grounds to the little white wagon parked at Pennsylvania and East Executive avenues. He hastened to add that he would be glad to give some peanuts to the King, whether he gets the royal signature or not.

Steve, incidentally, expects to become an American citizen about the same time the King and Queen arrive here. "I love this country—it is here," he said, placing his hand over his heart.

The Post Regrets Misusing Name of Edward Pumphrey

In its early editions of May 12, 1939, The Post incorrectly said that Edward Pumphrey was being tried in District court on a charge of bringing a 15-year-old girl into the District for immoral purposes.

Capital News In Brief

Wrong Apes Here

Not what the doctor ordered, but "far from common," is a shipment of East African monkeys just received by the Zoo.

The new arrivals have red crowns, white mustaches and hold themselves erect. Because of this they are called "hussars" or "military" monkeys, but their correct name is patos monkeys. There are seven in the shipment—three females, each with a young offspring, and one male.

Dr. William Mann, Zoo director, ordered four specimens of the "sykes guenon," a fairly common monkey. The dealer called and said he had none but could furnish some "red colobus," one of the rarest. The order was made and the crate arrived, but when acting director Ernest Walker peered in he found only "patos."

Cafe Brawlers Hunted

Montgomery County Police broadcast a lookout last night for two men who, following a fight in a restaurant, crashed their car into a bank on Conduit road, near the District line and fled. James E. Rickett, 32, of Cabin John, Md., received a cut on his head when struck with a chair in the fight, police said.

Laundry Looted

When Sam Lee, Chinese laundryman, of 815 T street northwest, opened his shop this morning he found it ransacked, the laundry scattered and several dollars in change missing from his cash box. The thief had entered by breaking a basement window.

George Parent Dies In Home Near Olney

A heart attack caused the death in his home near Olney, Md., Saturday night of George Parent, 66, veteran of the Spanish-American War and for the past 15 years a resident of the Olney neighborhood.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Lillian Parent, and two daughters, Jean Parent, a student at the State Normal School, Towson, Md., and Mrs. Ann Painter, of Philadelphia. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

Two N. J. Women Hurt As Car Hits Culvert

Mrs. Mary Luftensteiner, 54, of Robinsville, N. J., and her daughter, Mrs. Mary Wilson, 29, of Trenton, N. J., were injured last night when their car crashed into a culvert on the Washington-Baltimore boulevard to avoid hitting another car. Both suffered cuts and bruises and were treated at St. Agnes' Hospital in Baltimore.

Cathedral Service Held For Wilson

Christian Unity Rites Follow Tribute at War President's Tomb

"As one connected with the cathedral for many years, I have had excellent opportunities to measure the high regard of the American people for Woodrow Wilson," said Canon Anson Phelps Stokes yesterday as friends gathered to place a wreath at Wilson's tomb.

"No man is referred to more frequently or with greater respect from the cathedral pulpit than is Woodrow Wilson," said Canon Stokes in the presence of Mrs. Wilson and dignitaries, "for no matter what differences of opinion may be held, all thoughtful men recognize in him a great statesman, idealist, and a man of sterling Christian character."

Members of the New Jersey State Society also attended the rites, at which Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, of the District National Guard, made the presentation address.

Unity Service

Shortly after the service, held in the Bethlehem Chapel, the Cathedral's annual service in the interest of Christian unity began, with pastors and choirs of several congregations participating.

"Because freedom is the servant of faith," said Dr. William Adams Brown, D. D., LL. D., Honorary Canon of the Cathedral, delivering the principal address, "the totalitarian states are doomed, for history shows that a civilization not rooted in religion cannot survive."

The dictators say "I will give you something for which you can risk your life," Dr. Brown pointed out, adding that "the church, too, must speak with certainty, for in Christianity alone do we find enduring outlet for man's aspirations."

In introducing the speaker, the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, said that the unity service was falling, most appropriately, on Whitsunday, the birthday of the Christian Church.

Dr. Harris Participates

"The foundation of Christian unity is the incarnation of our Lord Jesus Christ," declared the prelate. Choirs of the Mount Pleasant Congregational, Reformation Lutheran, National City Christian, Foundry Methodist churches and the Cathedral took part. Dr. Frederick Brown also participated.

Recalling the significance of approaching Memorial Day, many churches yesterday sponsored special programs, among them Hamline Methodist Church, where the adult department of the Sunday school, with the co-operation of the American Legion, paid tribute to the dead.

Dr. H. W. Burgan, the pastor, spoke of the occasion, another feature of which was a prayer offered by the group for the families of the Squalus victims.

National Park Names Chapel After Dean

Katharine Munford Is Honored Before Graduation Rites

Dedication of the college chapel in honor of Miss Katharine Munford, dean, who has been a member of the faculty since 1907, preceded baccalaureate services yesterday at National Park College, Forest Glen, Md. The chapel henceforth will be known as Munford Chapel.

The dedication address was made by Mrs. Lavinia Cloud Preitz, class of '23, after an announcement of the dedication by President Roy Tasco Davis.

The prayer was led by the Rev. Raphael H. Miller, of the National City Christian Church, who delivered the baccalaureate sermon.

Organ accompaniments were by Fannie Helner, organist, while the choir was led by Prudence Fish, director. Harriet Herman and Jo Ellen Humphries sang a duet.

Approximately 200 members of the Alumnae Association are expected to be in attendance by today. An exhibition by the fine arts department was held last night at the art studios.

Dean Elmer Kayser, of George Washington University, will address the history and social science departments students today at 1 p. m.

Eight Chilean students, on a goodwill tour of the United States, reached the Capital yesterday for a visit which will include an audience with President Roosevelt. They are (front row, left to right) Leon Wainer, Luis Ruben Azoiar, Prof. Emilio Tagle Prouvay, Adrian Figueroa. Back row—Fernando Aruelles, Rafael Gonzalez, Celso Ruiz and Antonio Miras. The pennant they are holding will be presented to the President

Eight youthful Chilean ambassadors of good will last night told The Post they were more struck by the Oklahoma oil wells than the 3,000 girls in the Texas State College for Women, but admitted that they received "the very best impression of the looks and manners of American girls."

Here on a six-weeks' tour of American cities and universities, the group arrived in Washington last night with warm praise for everything in the United States, but particularly for the cordial welcome they have everywhere received.

"Americans don't have that utilitarianism we expected to find so dominant," they said. "Even businessmen leave their work and go out of their way to be courteous to us."

The great interest in Latin-American affairs they had encountered at American universities was a pleasant surprise, but more of a surprise was the "fast pace of American dancing." The so-called American dancing is popular in Chile, but it has nothing to do with the way people dance here," they declared, admitting they prefer their own way of doing it.

Well-equipped university libraries also impressed the group, they explained through Francesco Aguileva, of the Pan-American Union, who interpreted for the reporter. "We were amazed to find a college library full of students on a Sunday," he translated.

Emilio Tagle Prouvay, professor of economics at the University of Chile at Santiago, leads the group of seven students in the School of Economics and Commerce of the university, which was founded by Pedro Aguirre Cerda, now president of Chile. They bring with them a university banner inscribed as a gift to President Roosevelt from the university council.

Arriving in Texas on May 16, they have been entertained by chambers of commerce, universities, fraternities, boards of trade, Y. M. C. A.'s and automobile companies in a tour of Texas, Oklahoma, Missouri, Illinois and Indiana. They came from Pittsburgh last night to the International House here, which will be their headquarters for a five-day stay.

District Widow Kills Self With Poison in Hotel

Found in agony after swallowing poison in a room of the Continental Hotel early yesterday morning, Estella O. Gartner, 52, of 3821 Calvert street northwest, died two hours later in Casualty Hospital.

Her telephone receiver fell from its hook at 6:30 a. m., attracting the attention of the switchboard operator who sent the night watchman, Herbert Buckley, of 5618 Wisconsin avenue northwest, to investigate.

Buckley found the woman in extreme pain, and crying repeatedly: "Why did I do it?" Her husband died about two years ago and friends said she had been in ill health.

Women to Resume Hotel Picketing

The Washington League of Women Shoppers will renew its picket line in front of the George Mason Hotel in Alexandria this week, it was announced last night. The league has participated with the striking waitresses since the dispute began five months ago.

Tour of Gettysburg

The Capital Hiking Club will make a tour of the Gettysburg battlefields tomorrow, for which special busses will leave 1416 F street northwest at 9 a. m. The party will return about 6 p. m. Hiking is optional. Reservations may be made by calling Michigan 6363, extension 607.

Dr. Hornell Hart to Speak

Dr. Hornell Hart, professor of sociology at Duke University, will give the closing lecture in a series of ten sponsored by the Department of Agriculture Graduate School at 5 p. m. Friday in the Agriculture auditorium, south building. His subject is "National Social Problems in a World Community."

Heat at 92 Here, Record For '39; Beaches Thronged

Country, mountain and beach-bound motorists jammed Washington bridges and highways yesterday as a blazing sun drove the mercury to 92—a new high for the year.

Despite the heavy traffic, relatively few accidents were reported in the Washington area. A Washington woman was shot in the back while picnicking at Leland, Md.

In Washington, tan seekers and sports lovers flocked to the baseball diamonds, tennis courts, golf courses, bike and horse paths, swimming pools and spots where they could stretch out in the sunlight.

Motorboats Stolen

On the Potomac, Harbor Police reported, "everything that would float" was cruising the river. Scores of rowers and canoeists looked on as a police launch chased and captured four youths in two stolen motorboats.

For the second consecutive day yesterday's high temperature set a new mark for 1939. Showers which were promised for the District pelted instead the outlying Maryland areas. "Traces" of rain within the District, however, were officially observed by the Weather Bureau.

Showers are again predicted for this afternoon and tonight, but cooler and fairer weather is foreseen for Memorial Day—Tuesday.

Home returning motrists clogged District arteries even more heavily than morning traffic. At 7 p. m. the Highway Bridge was a solid mass of cars stretching bumper to bumper for blocks beyond the Virginia side of the span. On Defense Highway, leading from the Chesapeake Bay beaches, police reported an unbroken chain of autos from the Peace Cross at Bladensburg back for 2 miles.

Suffers Flesh Wound

Mrs. Janet Sweeney, of 1600 Potomac avenue southeast, suffered a flesh wound to the back yesterday when shot by her sister, Louise Williams, of the same address, while they were on an outing with three others on a Leland, Md., farm.

Miss Williams, police said, had been shooting at a toy balloon when she struck her sister. Mrs. Sweeney was rushed to Casualty Hospital and later transferred to Providence Hospital. Prince Georges County police are investigating.

Four juveniles, aged 12 to 15, were caught by members of the police launch squad yesterday after they had stolen two 16-foot motorboats from the Potomac River Line wharf at Seventh and L streets southwest.

Although police were unaware the boats were stolen, they ordered them to halt when observing that they were being operated by children. The children raced off with the speedboats, and the police gave chase for more than 20 minutes before catching up with their quarry in Georgetown Channel.

Wilson Line and Potomac River Line excursion boats carried more than 2,500 Washingtonians down the river to Quantico and Marshall Hall. At Hains Point thousands basked in the sun as hundreds of cyclists trundled around the promontory.

Three thousand folks went swimming at Glen Echo Park, and another 1,000 were dipping in at Washington Airport pool. A policeman described Rock Creek Park as a "battlefield after a tough engagement" after seeing some 8,000 persons lolling in the sun and shade. Thirty thousand spectators visited the Zoo.

Large crowds were reported at Annapolis, North Beach, Chesapeake Beach, Colonial Beach, and other resort towns.

Girl, 26, Injured In Collision Here

Audrey Blackman, 26, of 100 Clay street northwest, suffered concussion of the brain and other head injuries when the car in which she was a passenger collided with another at Sixth and K streets northeast. The driver of the car, George R. Middledorf, of 611 K street northeast, escaped unhurt.

Catholics Honor Dead At Arlington

Bishop Ireton Says Only Return to Spiritual Ideals Can Avert War

The present and future "scourge of war" can only be averted by a return to spiritual ideals—the sole basis for a true democracy, the Most Rev. Peter L. Ireton, Coadjutor Bishop of Richmond, yesterday advised 3,000 Catholics assembled in Arlington to do homage to their dead.

"Had the principles of religion, the principles underlying the Constitution been permitted to find complete lodgement in the soul of every American," the prelate declared at the first solemn military field mass ever held on the hallowed spot, "we should not be here today . . . there would be no room, no occasion for such a Memorial Day. Or, if it were, it would be to memorialize soldiers of peace, not of war."

Bishop's Throne Used

Garbed in a cardinal-red cape and white-lace cassock, he spoke from a fern and palm-banked pulpit on the rotunda in the amphitheater, shortly after participating in impressive rites of mass before a candle-lit altar, near a bishop's throne, the latter used for the first time in Arlington.

While the choristers from St. Paul's College, Catholic University, chanted the "Veni Sancte Spiritus," the sequence for Whitsunday, the solemn rites began, with Col. William Arnold, chief of Army chaplains, as celebrant, assisted by Father Joseph Gedra, of Immaculate Conception Church, sub-deacon, and Father Frederick W. Meehling, United States Navy chaplain, deacon.

The Very Rev. Mgr. A. J. Burggraff, C. S. P., superior of St. Paul's College, and Father Frank McNab, C. S. P., of Toronto, assisted Bishop Ireton in the service, which opened with a concert by the green-coated Knights of Columbus Band, followed by a procession into the front of the arena by soldiers of the Sixteenth Field Artillery, led by their band. William Cobaugh, C. S. P., was master of ceremonies.

Prelate Blesses Wreaths

Following the mass, the prelate proceeded with fellow ecclesiastics to the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, where he blessed the wreaths placed by representatives of more than 50 local Catholic organizations. Col. Thomas Carlin, State deputy, and William Mulligan, State warden, acted for the national organization of the Knights of Columbus.

Alfred McGarraghy served as general chairman of the program, held under the auspices of the Knights of Columbus, whose members, attired in morning dress, and bearing their gleaming swords, acted as ushers, and formed a lane at the Tomb through which the wreath-bearers passed.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Boston, Mass., May 28.—With complete disregard for the virtues of regular habits and clean living as exemplified by Tunney-ish young Lou Nova, the gentlemen on Forty-ninth street are installing Max Baer as a 5-to-8 shot to pin back the ears of Nova come Thursday night at Yankee Stadium.

POVICH

In other words, they think that Baer, despite his between-bout program of night-clubbing and plain fooling around, can go into training for a month and lick the only fellow who is given any sort of a chance to lick Joe Louis some day.

Joe Louis will be a spectator Thursday night at the ringside, but perhaps not a vitally interested spectator. The winner of the Baer-Nova fight is to get the dubious reward of a match with Louis, but the champion should not be vitally concerned Thursday evening. He has but to reflect that a fellow he made a pulverized mess of four years ago in the same ring and is now four years older, is the favorite to beat another of his challengers. The threat to Joe Louis' title is not even serious.

Only Direct Line of Comparison

The only direct line of comparison between Nova and Baer is provided by Tommy Farr who, during his sensational losing streak in this country, dropped a decision to each of 'em. On the basis of those bouts, Baer should be the favorite over Nova. Nova licked Farr, 'tis true, but had a harrowing time doing it. Baer all but knocked the Englishman out. He marked Farr up worse even than did Joe Louis.

Gene Tunney, after seeing Baer in training, apparently was not impressed. Anyway, Tunney, who last winter dismissed Nova as "simply a bad fighter," and predicted that Baer would beat him, has reversed his opinion as the fight nears. Now he is picking Nova. But if he is making his choice on the strength of what he saw in Baer's camp, he should know better.

It was back in 1933 that Mr. Bill Brown, of the New York Boxing Commission, visited Baer's camp and, after watching the Californian clown about, demanded that his title fight with Primo Carnera be called off. At that time Brown said for publication, "Baer isn't in shape, and they shouldn't let him go in there. Carnera will make a bum out of him."

That didn't happen, of course. Carnera made no bum out of Baer. What happened was that Baer knocked big Primo down 12 times and then knocked him out. And when he did, he crawled through the ropes to address Mr. Brown at the ringside in person and demand "Who's a bum now, Mr. Brown." The inference was plain enough.

Maybe He'll Choose to Fight?

But the unpredictable Baer is not worth a nickel bet by anybody, nevertheless. One never knows when he will choose to fight. Against Jimmy Braddock he let a million-dollar title slip out of his grasp by simply refusing to defend it after the fight started. And against Joe Louis, in 1934, he took one flurry of punches at Louis, did no damage, and then retired to one knee for the rest of the evening until Arthur Donovan counted him out.

Baer's training routine, however, can not be held too heavily against him. Despite the supposed virtues of clean living and exemplary habits, athletes who never subscribed to that deportment have done very well for themselves. Baer was a wild liver while he was fighting his way to the top, but he made it. And, as we were saying, there are other cases in point.

Nobody ever accused Babe Ruth of keeping training except when he felt like it, but the Babe did right well. After a bad night he was still a potent package up there at the plate. And a catcher with Cleveland was a better catcher with a hangover than other catchers were cold sober.

Old Grover Cleveland Alexander was no teetotaler, but he did all right, particularly that day when he came out of the bull pen in the 1926 World Series to strike out Tony Lazzeri, still breathing the breath of Bacchus. And Eleanor Holm, champagne parties and all, would have won the Olympic backstroke back in 1932, if "straight-laced" A. A. U. officials hadn't blown the whistle on her.

We aren't plumping for that sort of training by budding young athletes. It certainly carries the threat of harm and can do no good. Early to bed and early to rise is still the best principle. But the winner of the 4-H Club health prize, if he can't hook with his left or cross with his right, has no business in the ring, even against an old rounder like Baer. The will to win ain't enough.

Cricket II Wins Post Trophy in Regatta

Perfect Weather Prevails as Boats Vie for Post Trophies; Buchan's Vayu Wins Long Distance Race on Corrected Time

By Bob Knight.
Post Boating Editor.

Gunston Cove, Va., May 28.—A stiff breeze from the south rolled over the bluffs of this historic harbor today, driving to a glorious victory H. C. Bush's Cricket II in the closely contested 20-foot restricted class. Bush's black-hulled windjammer, by virtue of a morning and afternoon winning performance, won The Washington Post Trophy for its division, nosing out Dr. Albert E. Pagan aboard the Kan Doo and Judge Prentice E. Edrington's Lady Avon.

Today's weather would have thrilled the heart of the most critical blue water sailor. Despite the weatherman's report of rain, the sky was banked with billowy clouds while the wind blew over the course as high as 25 miles an hour.

Wide Open Race

Crickett II nipped the morning race by plunging over the finish 13 seconds in front of Judge Edrington's Craft. It was anyone's race most of the way. The two 20-footers went into the last leg of the final round abreast with Dr. Pagan. Bush's boat, however, drew away at the midway mark and slammed home three lengths ahead of the runner-up. Dr. Pagan crossed eight seconds after Judge Edrington.

Bush's performance was surpassed, perhaps, when it was announced by race officials that George Buchan's Vayu, a newly launched lightning class sloop, had won the Alexandria-Gunston Cove race yesterday on a basis of corrected time. A tentative report by the race committee placed W. W. Valentine's snipe Eleanor in the winning position.

First to Finish

The Eleanor was the first to finish the 11-mile jaunt yesterday, but lost out to the Vayu on a handicap basis. The Eleanor, nevertheless, will be awarded The Washington Post Trophy, an award for the first craft to finish. Vayu proved her consistency today by grabbing another Post award when she won the Class A Handicap cup for boats more than 18 feet in length.

Today's stout breeze resulted in several crack-ups. In the morning race, Les Wright, former Chesapeake Bay snipe champion, nearly lost the rudder of his Fan Tan III when it split under the pressure of the fast-running water. He attempted to continue the race, but was forced to withdraw when the Fan Tan III lost considerable headway. With a borrowed rudder he came back in the afternoon race to win over Ernest Covert's new Comet Scandal.

The Post trophy for comets was taken by Henry Brylawski, who won the early race and came in

Cincinnati and Cards Split Two Games; Reds Keep Lead

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, May 28.—The St. Louis Cardinals snapped Cincinnati's string of 12 straight victories by winning the first game of today's doubleheader, 6 to 5, but yielded, 8 to 4, in the nightcap before the biggest crowd in two years.

The 33,538 spectators were thrilled by the pulsating opener, but had little to cheer about in the second game, in which Paul Derringer, former Cardinal right-hander, pitched shutout ball for seven innings behind an 8-0 lead.

Hold Slim Lead

The Reds' victory, their third in four games of the "crucial" series with the Cards, enabled them to hold their slim lead in the National League pennant chase. A double victory for the Cards would have lifted them back on top.

In the first game, Curt Davis posted his sixth straight victory and his seventh of the season by gaining the edge on Johnny "Double No-Hit" Vander Meer, who was beaten for the second time this year. Johnny struck out seven men, all in the first four innings, but he dealt out nine passes.

The Cards scored three runs in that round, and after a see-saw struggle which was tied up by Frank McCormick's home run in the fifth, the Cards finally won out in the sixth on a double by Jimmy Brown and a single by Pepper Martin.

Derringer allowed ten hits, but matched Vander Meer in strikeouts, and did not give up the last five blows until the Reds had all of their eight runs.

Picard Ties Runyan in Golf Play-Off

Birdies Last Hole To Gain Deadlock In Metro Play

By Bob Considine.

White Plains, N. Y., May 28.—Henry Picard, tousled-haired pro from Hershey, Pa., tied another knot in the already snarled metropolitan open at the Metropolis Club today.

A great 8-iron shot that curled up and died five feet from the pin, on the eighteenth, gave Picard a birdie-three and enabled him to tie Paul Runyan, of the host club, who had led him through the entire latter half of today's play-off for the title. Picard, Runyan and Vic Ghezzi, of Deal, N. J., finished the regulation 72 holes yesterday in 283 strokes each. Today, Picard and Runyan finished in another hot embrace with one-under-par 70's, while Ghezzi dropped out of the white-hot play-off.

Picard and Runyan will have to do it all over again tomorrow. It will be another 18-hole test, and in case of a tie they'll play 18 more on Tuesday, etcetera.

Money in the Bank

Runyan, the bronzed little giant killer of big league golf, had his first-prize money mentally banked as he strode over the mountain-goat layout of the difficult back nine. He had drawn abreast of Picard with a sensational 25-foot putt for a birdie on the ninth, and he went three strokes ahead of the Hershey player by the time the safari had meandered to the thirteenth. He nearly went four strokes ahead on the fourteenth, when his putt circled the bucket and popped out. Ghezzi, playing like a man clubbing a snake to death, was far out of it by this time.

But now as the thing came along to the finish line, and the dark cloak of a squall settled over the course, Picard turned on the steam. While Runyan was contenting himself with a conservative part five on the 530-yard fifteenth, Picard blazed a terrific brassie almost to the green, chipped up dead and holed out for a birdie. That cut Little Poison's advantage to two shots.

They all took threes on the short sixteenth, and Runyan seemed to have the thing well in hand when Picard's drive on the 363-yard seventeenth tore into the deep grass to the right. Runyan was down the middle with one of those copy-righted lunging drives. Ghezzi,

Joe Haynes, Masterson Are Pounded

Williams, Cronin Hit Homers as 14,000 See Sox Win 4th in Row; Lewis Stars at Bat

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Boston, May 28.—Those blasts you might have heard in the vicinity of Fenway Park this afternoon were not a WPA job, although the idea is not so far fetched. The Red Sox were leaning against the pitching of two of Bucky Harris' young innocents, and the Nats, on their performance today, could qualify as unskilled labor.

What happened was a 12-to-7 game in which the Red Sox whaled the daylights out of the Washington athletes for the third day in a row to mop up the four-game series. And they did it with what appeared to be the hearty co-operation of the Nats, who first booted the ball game away and then made only a feeble

14,000 See Game

The 14,000 citizens in the stands saw the Red Sox wipe out a 4-to-0 Washington lead in one grand, six-run upheaval in the third inning, when Cecil Travis and Ossie Bluege kicked in a batch of gift runs. After that the Red Sox started blasting. Jimmy Foxx slammed a two-run triple in the fifth, Ted Williams delivered a two-run homer a moment later, and in the seventh Joe Cronin slammed Boston's eighth homer of the series.

That blow by Williams deserves a separate paragraph, incidentally. The angular outfielder performed something of a feat by knocking a slow curve, pitched by Walter Masterson, into the bleachers in right centerfield. Supplying all the power, Williams drove the ball 440 feet into the stands.

Joe Haynes was charged with the defeat, but any court in the land would uphold him in counter-charges agains his infield. Haynes lasted only three innings, but the Red Sox scored six runs against him with the aid of only two hard-hit balls.

Young Walter Masterson, who relieved him, had no such alibi. The Red Sox simply teed off against him and dynamited five of their last six runs across the plate.

False Impressions

Giving false impressions at the start, the Nats pried four runs out of their supposed nemesis, Fred Ostermuller, in the first three innings to knock him out of the box. But against Dennis Galehouse, the former Indian, they subsided meekly after that. Galehouse pitched two-hit ball until the ninth, when the Nats came up with three futile runs.

The Nats couldn't get George Case home after he walked, stole second and moved to third with one out, but in the second they came up with a run on a pair of singles by Ossie Bluege and Angelo Giuliani. And in the third they improved their lead to 4-0 because Lewis doubled against the leftfield wall, Tabor made a wild throw on Travis' bunt, and Bobby Estalella slammed a long three-bagger against the centerfield wall, only inches short of a homer.

But the next 12 runs of the ball game were scored, it is painful to relate, by the Red Sox.

Get Breaks Early

They scored six of 'em, as we were saying, in the third inning. They got a break right off the bat when Desautels' grounder took a freak hop over Lewis' head, and then Pinch Hitter Lou Finney singled to right. Then Doerr drove a double play ball through Travis' legs, and then Bluege mussed up a soft grounder off Cramer's bat, which was generously scored as a hit. With the bases full after Vosmik walked, Jimmy Foxx drove a single through the box to drive in the third and fourth runs of the inning, and then Williams helped the Nats out by hitting Foxx with a grounder toward rightfield. Then Bluege failed to come up with Cronin's soft grounder and the fifth run of the inning scored. The sixth trotted home on Tabor's force out.

It ceased to be a contest in the fifth inning, with Masterson pitching. Cramer led off with a single and then Travis made a wild chuck on Vosmik's double play ball. Then Foxx slammed a triple against the centerfield fence to score two runs, and then Williams produced two more with his enormous homer.

That made it 10-4 and in the sixth they made it 11-4, thanks to Bobby Estalella's boot on a single by Doerr. And in the seventh Joe Cronin personally made in 12-4 with his homer over the leftfield wall.

A single by Case and another by Welaj were the only Washington hits from the third inning through the eighth. In the ninth the Nats came up with three runs mainly because Lewis tripled into right-field, but the rally fell slightly short—five runs short.

Selkirk Hits Two Homers, Yanks Win

Outfielder's Second Pair in Two Games Decides 9-5 Fray

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 28.—The Yankees reverted to their old slugging habits today to chalk up their fifth consecutive victory, 9 to 5, over the Philadelphia Athletics.

With George Selkirk getting two home runs, the second successive day he has grouped two in a single game, the champions pummeled three Philadelphia pitchers for a dozen hits.

Rookie Atley Donald staggered through nine innings behind this exalted attack to get credit for his fourth victory without defeat. He gave ten hits and the A's made use of a homer by Bill Nagel to bunch three runs and take the lead in the second inning.

Lynn Nelson started for the Athletics and survived a home run by Bill Dickey in the third inning only to get shelled from the mound in the fourth as the Yankees bombed five tallies across the plate.

Bob Joyce, who had worked the first five innings of yesterday's second game of a double-header, then was pressed into service and was the victim of Selkirk's homers in the fifth and seventh innings—the latter with one on. It was Joyce who served up both Selkirk's circuit smashes yesterday, too. Nelson Potter finished without damage.

Dizzy Dean Wins Second Game For Cubs, Beating Pirates, 6 to 2

Former Cardinal Hurler Limits Bucs To Eight Safeties

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 28.—Dizzy Dean won his second game of the season today when he limited the Pittsburgh Pirates to eight hits while the Chicago Cubs punched out a 6-to-2 victory in the finale of the series.

Until the Pirates scored two runs in the fifth inning, Diz had pitched 18 scoreless innings in one relief job and two starts.

Even then, the Pirates should not have scored. Bill Swift, who finished the game for Pittsburgh after Joe Bowman had been knocked out in the third inning, got on base in the fifth when his pop fly fell between Gabby Hartnett, Dean and Glen Russell for a hit. Swift's fly would have been the second out and P. Waner's fly the third out.

With two men on, then, Arky Vaughan, the Pirates' shortstop, tripled to score the only two runs Dean has allowed in 23 innings of pitching this season. Diz allowed only one walk and was in command of the situation at all times.

The Cubs made nine hits. Manager Hartnett drove in three of the six Cub runs with a double and a single while Dean got a double and single of his own.

Nationals Open 3-Game Series With A's Today

Boston, May 28.—Possession a newly acquired four-game losing streak, the Nats tonight entrained for Washington, where tomorrow they open a three-game series with the Athletics.

They will be attempting to stave off the A's who are challenging for sixth place. After a single game tomorrow, the two clubs will meet in a twin bill on Decoration Day.

Ferrell, Unsuccessful, Released by Yankees

31-Year-Old Pitcher, 'Ten-Year Man' Can Sign With Any Club

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 28.—Wes Ferrell, 31-year-old veteran right-hander, was handed his unconditional release by the New York Yankees today.

For many years one of the American League's leading hurlers, he was the only member of the present Yankee pitching staff with less than a .500 percentage. He had lost two and won one.

Since Ferrell is a "ten-year man" in major league service he is free to negotiate for a connection with any other club in either league. He signed with the Yankees last August after being released by the Washington Nationals and previously had played with the Boston Red Sox and Cleveland Indians.

The Yankees now are one under the 25-player limit with nine pitchers, including Spurgeon Chandler, who was injured before spring training started and has never joined the club.

Government's Fagan Dominates Fort Myer Horse Show

Carters Ride Gelding to Three Blues

Smacko Takes Open Jumping; Jinwich Defeats Field in Working Hunters

By Anne Hagner.

The ribbons at yesterday's final session of the two-day Army Relief Horse Show at the Fort Myer Gardens were scattered among a large number of exhibitors instead of concentrated in one mount or stable. Fagan, workmanlike brown gelding owned by the United States Government and ridden alternately by Mrs. Leslie Carter, of Fort Myer, and her son Robert, proved to be the biggest winner of the show by virtue of a blue in the ladies' hunter class on Saturday, another blue yesterday in the junior hunters, and a third in the event for working hunters.

In the open jumping division, the Government's recent Fort Myer champion, Smacko, piloted by Lieut. Charles McClelland, won the fault and out class after three jumpoffs with another Army entry, Tom Lewis, in addition to taking two yellow ribbons, indicative of third place, in Saturday's show. It is Smacko's final local appearance until after a tour of the Northern Circuit, including West Point and Tuxedo, N. Y., where he will be competing against some of the East's finest jumpers.

Jinwich Wins

The working hunters class, one of the toughest on the card, saw some brilliant performances over the outside course, which necessitated taking such obstacles as a brush at the top of a steep hill, just three strides away from a ditch with water in it, and a few yards away a drop jump which always makes for risky fencing. Another spot that had spectators bothered was a steep bank to be taken at a gallop, which, surprisingly enough, had better performances than much easier looking post and rail fences farther along the route.

The class was taken by Jane Kromer's Jinwich, who has made a clean sweep of other similar events this season. Judges are apparently fond of the 11-year-old gelding's careful, distance-judging stride as he moves first to the left and then to the right to measure his fences, and under Miss Kromer's guidance he has won almost every time out.

Army Dominated

The Army entries completely dominated the class for handicap jumpers, in which the horses were divided into three classes according to past performances. First was Lieut. Charles Hines on Bumper, who committed the oddest fault of the day when he hit the middle bar of a triple bar, without changing its height or touching the highest bar. Although the middle bar went down, Lieut. Hines' mount garnered only one-half a fault, according to International Equestrian Federation rules, under which the classes were scored.

The luck of Ruth Ellen Patton, hard-riding daughter of the post's commanding officer, continued to be definitely on the bad side, as several runouts and refusals kept her out of the winner's circle most of the afternoon. In the fault and out class she took a nose dive from Whaihou as the Hawaiian-bred gelding nearly fell over a stiff fence. Both escaped uninjured, however.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, May 28.—What interests you?

BASEBALL?—We had breakfast the other morning with the old arbitrator, Bill Klem, and were astounded all over again by the old boy's wonderful appetite for life. Will's been singing them out now for 40 years, but he was looking forward to umpiring that day's ball game as much as he did his first big league game. The venerable dean is thinner this year and in better shape than he has been for perhaps ten years.

CONSIDINE

He thinks the modern rookie is much more of a gentleman than the rookie of 10, 20, 30, yea, 40 years ago. "Got more sense and respect for authority," Will said. "He knows it's no use coming up out of that dugout to argue about a matter of judgment." Will takes a fatherly interest in a lot of the current youngsters. Some of them even come to him and ask him what sort of work they should look for during the off season.

"Told a kid up at Boston some time ago to quit his job in a haberdashery and do some real laborious work. Well, the next day Casey Stengle came to me and he said, 'Hell, Will, quit telling my kids to get a job in a laboratory.'"

Little Upset Over Last Reversal

Will is still a little upset over his last reversal. He's had two of them, the first one in 1911, when he wouldn't call Hans Wagner out, after Hans contemptuously stepped out of the batters' box while a Cincinnati Red pitcher was purposly walking him. He argued that Cincinnati got all it was looking for when it walked Wagner, and wasn't entitled to an out. He was overruled. As for the other reversal, Will wouldn't call a wind-blown pop fly an "infield fly," though it dropped in fair territory near the home plate after going up foul. When they got after him about it, Will shouted that his ruling was in line with a similar incident that had happened 25 years before, but it did him no good. But Will hasn't given up on that. The only umpire ever honored with a plaque by a group of sports writers, says he's going to live long enough to see that one reversed.

RACING?—There's an old saying around the horse parks that nobody ever had to make an excuse for a real good horse. But how about Johnstown? There's a real good horse, but you'll have to excuse him every time the track is muddy, or even cuppy. He came back Saturday on a bone dry track—his first outing since running fifth in the muddy Preakness—to win the Withers mile in 1:35 4-5. Jimmy Stout let him gallop easily all down the stretch at Belmont, to win by six lengths. There is no telling how badly he would have cracked the track or even the world mile record if he had been pressed.

Given a break in the weather, Johnstown will win the 3-year-old championship breezing, though after looking at the Preakness we can't believe that he'll ever beat Challedon in the goo.

BOXING?—Wonder why any of us allowed ourselves to be led into believing that Henry Armstrong was going to blow his welterweight title to that Limey, Roderick. According to Syd Hulls, the British promoter, Roderick doesn't rank in the first three or four British welters, and there was no chance that he could beat Armstrong except by being fouled. Henry comes close to fouling only when he is hard pressed, and then he must hit a man as best he can. But he is good enough to beat all the Rodericks in the world, with one hand tied behind him. Henry had too tough a time, back down the years, to cough up that hard-won welterweight title to a British fighter. He won't sell it soon, or cheaply.

Baer Still Has One Fan

Max Baer, by the by, has a supporter. He's Abe Lyman, the band leader. Abe bet $8,800 on Baer in the Louis fight, after Max had assured him just before the gong that he'd knock Joe's block off, and when Abe went howling to Baer after the fight Max snorted, "Hey, do you want me to get killed for your lousy 88 hundred?" But Abe's regard for Max is inextinguishable. He's betting $500 this time that Max knocks out Nova within five rounds, and Baer has asked him to dig up some other gents who want to make the same bet. Max wants to bet some of his own money, along the same lines.

GOLF?—Gene Sarazen heard Lawson Little mention the other day at the Metropolitan Open that he was going to play in the British Open this year, and Gene promptly let out a snort. "Boy, you're really in for the surprise of your life," Sarazen, British Open champion of 1932, told the young man who twice won the British amateur. "When you were over there before it was 'Mr.' Little this and 'Mr.' Little that, and 'Mr. Little, will you have some more lemon with your tea.' Now when you go back it'll be 'Little,' if they speak to you at all. And all those doors around the clubhouse—those doors you used to sail right through—well, now you'll have to knock. Buddy, you're a pro now, and over there they'll never let you forget it."

TENNIS?—Australia recently made a big purchase of war planes and tanks, and if any one wants to know why, here's a clew. Germany's Davis Cup team collapsed when they jailed Baron Gottfried von Cramm, so Hitler seized Austria and got its champion, George von Metaxa, and Czecho-Slovakia, and got Roderick Menzel. Australia apparently will fight to the last man for Jack Bromwich and Adrian Quist.

Johnny Allen Wins 100th for Indians, 6-0

Tribe Righthander Gives 3 Hits, 1st Victory After Operation on His Arm

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, May 28.—Johnny Allen, Cleveland ace right-hander, blanked the Chicago White Sox, 6 to 0, today to chalk up the 100th victory of his major league career.

Thornton Lee dueled on almost even terms with Allen until the seventh, when the Indians bunched three singles and triples by Sammy Hale and Julius Solters for five tallies to chase the Chisox southpaw.

Allen and Manager Jimmy Dykes, of Chicago, threatened to trade blows in the third and Outfielder Gerald Walker, of the White Sox, charged the Indians' pitcher after being hit on the head with a pitched ball in the sixth. Players of both teams stepped in before any blows were struck, however.

The victory was the first of the season for Allen who has the best lifetime average of any major league hurler.

Tigers Defeat St. Louis Browns

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, May 28. — The Detroit Tigers climbed into fifth place in the American League standings today by trouncing the St. Louis Browns, 6 to 2, behind the effective seven-hit flinging of Louis (Buck) Newsom. Newsom held his former teammates to one blow in the first six innings.

Young Johnny Kramer started for the Browns and was nicked for nine blows before being chased by a three-run barrage in the fifth. Bob Harris, a former Tiger, finished and yielded but one hit.

Big Hank Greenberg slammed out his ninth homer of the season for Detroit in the third with the sacks vacant.

Bill Bennings

At the Post

Dear Al:

It looks as if the stewards will have a ball team of suspended jockeys in the near future. Jockey R. Bernhardt was set down yesterday for five days. He was found guilty of rough riding. The diamond is in the infield. The stewards fined a trainer $10 recently for declaring a horse in a race for the sole purpose of obtaining a "star." Horses get "stars" each time they are entered and fail to get into action. Horses with the most "stars" are given preference in making up the entries. Herbert (Dynamite) Kerr has shipped Dizzy Dame, two-time winner here, to Delaware Park along with several others. The horsey set over in Montgomery County is all agog. It seems that Charles Town is contemplating a race exclusively for horses owned by sportsmen in the Rockville-Bethesda area. Among the owners who are training steeds for this and other events are "Red" Allnutt, Edward Cashell and Brooke Johns. Allnutt owned Chaplain, a fine racer in the "good old days." Chaplain began his career on the Rockville Fair Grounds and cleaned up everything in sight at Frederick, Hagerstown and Cumberland. At this last point, he won two races in one afternoon. Allnutt rode him in one race and Bud Stotler, now trainer for Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, had the mount in the others. If present plans go through, the "Montgomery County Special" should be a humdinger. It has been proposed that all officials for the race be Montgomery County men. The line-up looks like this: Kenneth Lyddane, starter; Blond Percy, flag waver; Shirley Hays, Vince Peter, Arthur Beall, patrol judges; Arthur Hershberger, Dr. Hershberger and Dr. Al Fink, placing judges; Douglas Diamond, clerk of scales and Dr. Vinson, mutuel manager. If this race comes off I want to see it, but I believe I will sit this one out. BILL.

First race—Miss Maker, a winner on the milers, has plenty of speed and may win at the first asking hereabouts. Deserves the pick. Wale Signal won here and has plenty of speed. Grand Waltz set the pace and was third in recent start.

Second race—Lady Buck broke a track mark last out and will be ready to run a smashing race if she can get off the reserve list. Small Change has been first and second in two tries and is fit as hands make horses. Adriatic went in the air at the break last out.

Third race—Caidon breaks off the rail and probably will have Palumbo up. This looks like the right spot. Rocky Mount has speed and appears to be a dangerous contender. Sugaboot has been scratched repeatedly and should go well.

Fourth race—James Pal seems best suited of this field. Was deadheated in that last. Gemwick was a surprise winner in a come-from-behind effort in a recent outing and is dangerous. Elegant Dame, in light, should go well.

Fifth race—Royal Veil likes this short sprint route and was carried wide in that recent test. I'm going to string along here. Lula Khayyam hasn't run her race as yet and will be a keen factor, especially on an off track. Repass for the minor award.

Sixth race—Ivonia goes for a new owner. This one has the speed and can go the long route. Two Aces closed ground on the milers and could be a prominent factor. Worthowning belongs in this company.

Seventh race—Pencader showed a return to good form in that last and may come right back with another set of brackets. Famous Clayton and Never Idol to take care of the place and show.

Best bet—Lady Buck.

Maj. McClure Medalist in Washington Club Title Event

Dick Meyer's 68 Leads Manor Play

East Potomac Golfers Beat Rock Creek; F. Thompson Wins Trophy at Beaver Dam Miss Brown, C. Malone Win Mixed Tourney

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Southpaw Maj. Robert B. McClure won medalist honors in the Washington Golf and Country Club championship yesterday, tacking a back nine of even par 35 to an outgoing 39 for a 74 and a stroke margin over Frank Williams.

It marks the second straight year that the Washington members have battled it out for the title in the spring, a fashion observed only by the Virginia club at Chevy Chase. The other champions are crowned in the annual fall play.

Nine scores were under the 80 mark in the championship flight qualifications, while scores of 82 tied for the last berth, with E. A. Martin winning over Elmer Jenkins, J. B. Heron, H. J. Webb and H. B. Willey, after a five-way tie for one place.

Frank Williams was second to the medalist with a 75, while Dr. W. R. McLister and F. S. Pomeroy had 76. Golf Committee Chairman and former Champion Ralph Fowler, Jimmy Corcoran and Dr. W. M. Ballinger 77, and Joe Baldwin, a former champion and C. H. Pardoe, 78.

Two rounds of match play must be completed by Friday night, with the semifinals on Saturday and the final round for the title vacated by Perry Patteson on Sunday. Maj. McClure meets Pardoe and Fowler opposes last year's comedalist, John Holzberg, in first-round features.

MANOR

Dick Meyer proved his finalist role in the Baltimore Country Club Invitation Tournament Saturday was no fluke, as he played his home Manor course in 68 strokes yesterday, two under par and only a stroke over the course record, to take a big lead in the Jack Pot Tournament.

After starting with two bogey fives, Meyer wrapped in three birdies on the next seven holes to crack par by a stroke on the first nine and then returned in another sub-par 34 for the 68.

The tournament is 36 holes, with handicaps, and Meyer's six-stroke allotment left him with a net 62, with one round yet to play. Prizes will also be awarded for selective holes, least putts, etc., while Tuesday's final round will also be followed by a driving contest.

Other low scores included Dr. C. V. Steifel, 87-19—68, and J. T. Maddox, 91-22—69.

R. C. Pettingill holed his second shot on the par 4 twelfth hole for an eagle deuce.

Four tied in the blind bogey event for Manor's women golfers on the inside nine. Mrs. J. W. Meyer, Mrs. P. W. Budsworth, Mrs. Howard Simons and Mrs. Mack Myers, all with net 35's. A flag day event, with pitching and putting, is scheduled for Tuesday.

Starting June 6, Mrs. Esther Simcoe, women's golf committee chairman, announced ladies' day at the club will be Tuesday, and not Monday.

EAST POTOMAC

East Potomac golfers had little trouble in topping Rock Creek representatives in the intracity public links team match yesterday on the downtown course, 10½ to 1½. After the 6-6 tie in the first match, the second was scheduled over the Rock Creek course but it was too crowded and the match was shifted.

Mel Shorey, host club pro, and his partner, Tommy Doerer, paired well for a best ball 67, five under par, to trounce the publinks champion and runner-up, Andy Oliveri and Bob Morris. Shorey had a 73 and Doerer 75.

Jim Gipe won the second annual East Potomac spring tournament by swamping Gene Fossum, 8 and 7, in the 36-hole finals, succeeding Gus Rittenhouse as champion. Results in the other flights and the team match results.

We don't see how a new tax is going to help recovery any more than a new button is going to make your galluses more elastic.

The undistributed profit tax is a pip. It distributes profits like feathers in a gale. Looks like we will finally reach the stage where there will be a profit tax on everything, including losses.

Indianapolis Race Field Completed as Six Qualify

By International News Service.

Speedway, Indianapolis, Ind., May 28.—In a dramatic, last-minute scramble the 33-car starting field for the twenty-seventh annual 500-mile race Tuesday was completed this afternoon on the 2½-mile Indianapolis Motor Speedway oval.

Positions in the tenth and eleventh rows of the lineup which will start the Memorial Day chase for gold and glory were filled just before the 5 o'clock deadline for qualifications.

Seven drivers actually passed the speedway qualifying requirements of four laps around the track at an average of 110 miles an hour or better, but only the six fastest got the remaining positions in the starting field.

Robson turned in a 10-mile average of 116.305 miles an hour but was crowded out of the thirty-third post in the starting field when Devore averaged 116.527 miles an hour. Devore's time for the qualifying run was only 59-hundredths of a second above Robson.

Al Miller, of Detroit, 123.233 miles an hour; Floyd Davis, of Springfield, Ill., 119.375 miles an hour; Louis Tomei, of Portland, Oreg., 118.425 miles an hour; Deacon Litz, of Dubois, Pa., 117.979 miles an hour, and Harry MacQuinn, of Milwaukee, 117.687 miles an hour.

Devore, son of the late Earl Devore, who performed for years at the speedway, qualified the Barbasol Special in which Ronney Householder, of Los Angeles, cracked up a few days ago. The car was repaired only yesterday and the youthful pilot started his successful run just a few minutes before the deadline.

Baer Shows Good Form In Workout

By the United Press.

Grossinger Lake, N. Y., May 28.—Max Baer gave a convincing display of form and condition before a crowd of more than 1,000 today as he continued workouts for his 15-round fight against Lou Nova in Yankee Stadium Thursday night.

Forced indoors by showers, Maxie reduced his boxing program to 3 rounds. He went one with Elza Thompson and two with Sandy McDonald, giving the most impressive performance since he began training.

Maxie boxed well and punched with both hired hands. He scored repeatedly with left jabs and hooks to the face, and short jolting rights to the body. Maxie will box again tomorrow, then complete training on Tuesday. He plans to motor into New York Wednesday morning.

Nova Concludes Heavy Training

Nyack, N. Y., May 28 (U.P.).—Lou Nova completed the more vigorous part of his training for Maxie Baer today when he boxed five rounds against three sparmates.

Nova narrowly escaped injury in the final round when Jimmy Smith accidentally thumbed him in the right eye. He also boxed with Jorge Brescia and Harry Weber.

This ended Lou's ring sessions until the fight Thursday night. He will do only road work tomorrow, confine his work to bag punching and calisthenics Tuesday, and rest completely Wednesday.

Al Weill, manager of former lightweight Champion Lou Ambers, visited Lou's camp today and predicted Nova to win by a decision. Harry Wills, former heavyweight contender, was the first visitor to Nova's camp who could not see the Alameda Adonis winning.

Silva Begins Training Today

Silva will workout at Turner's Arena at 2 o'clock this afternoon, returning to the scene of his greatest local triumphs—trouncings of Al Reid and Pete Galiano.

Rolling Road Golfers Down District Duos

Duplicate 1938 Feat If Indian Spring in State Four-Ball Play

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, May 28.—Rolling Road celebrated with a real party last night, as its president, Henry Morton, entertained the two winning teams in the semifinal round of the Maryland State Golf Association four-ball tournament, played at the Five Farms course of the Baltimore Country Club.

Consequently, the site of the final next Sunday is almost certain to be changed from Washington to Rolling Road, since there will be more interest in the intraclub final.

In the semifinals yesterday, Ernie Caldwell, winner of the Baltimore Country Club Invitation, and Gene Bruning defeated Claude Rippy and Jack Olmstead, Indian Spring, 4 and 3, while Spencer S. Overton and E. G. Barnes conquered Louis Fuchs and Earl McAleer, of Congressional, 3 and 2.

Overton and Barnes, the Rolling Road No. 1 team, will battle Caldwell and Bruning, the No. 2 representatives, for the title next Sunday. All are former Hillendalers, and Caldwell met Overton in the semifinals of the Invitation tournament at Five Farms.

Picard, Runyan Tie in Play-Off

completely out of it by now, had the best drive.

Picard now went into the weeds with his 8-iron, whacked at the sunken pill and spectacularly knocked it up to within inches of the cup. The pro-Runyan crowd of 2,000 gave him a substantial yell as he easily holed out for a birdie three. Runyan, trying to be cozy, was short with his approach and took a five. That shaved his advantage to a single stroke.

Finishes in Blaze

Picard finished in a blaze yesterday, to get into the triple tie, but today he was a conflagration. His whistling tee shot creased the dark air of the eighteenth fairway. His No. 8 iron shot bit into the green, straight up, bounced and died, and he rammed it home as if the ball were of metal and the bucket magnetized.

Runyan, with the tables now turned, all but blew his own short putt, for a par, because just as he was about to stroke the ball a guy in the gallery yelled, "What did you say, Mo?" This was the second triple tie in the 32-year history of the Met, but there have been a number of two-man playoffs—the last one in 1925 when Gene Sarazen beat McDonald Smith in a 36-holer.

Clinton Nine Wins

The Clinton Sacred Heart Shrine baseball team swamped Bennings C. C., 15-2, at Clinton yesterday.

Bill Ackerman

on Fishing

One of the greatest competitive tournaments ever held is under way at Cat Cay in the British Bahamas. That it was timed almost to the day is now a proven fact, for the traveling giant bluefin tuna started taking the proffered lures just four days before the go signal was hoisted.

ACKERMAN

There are teams representing the Miami Rod and Reel Club and the Cuban Club that will be hard to beat. Washington's only big game angler, Paul Townsend, captain of the American team in the International matches in Nova Scotia forthe past two years, was to have captained the team representing Cat Cay. That he was unable to do so was unfortunate, for his ability to beat the big fish fast is just what it takes in this kind of competition, and would have been a deciding factor in the final standings. Getting them on—never was much of a worry for Paul, and it isn't just a matter of luck or prayer either.

Instead, his Jacpau III leaves Miami this week under the command of genial Capt. Bill Hatch, just back from a winter in New Zealand and Australian waters after marlin, for Hatteras Island, N. C., where Paul will go aboard about June 15 for a try at the big blue marlin that are definitely known to frequent the Gulf stream waters, only 17 miles offshore at this point.

We hope it might be possible, not only to tell about the fight if one of the big fish is hooked, but to give a minute description over the air, which will be a simple matter with the Jacpau's radio phone if everyone isn't too excited to think about it.

There never has been a white marlin caught off the North Carolina coast, yet the Jacpau was in a large school of them last fall, and was speeded up to keep the fish from tearing up the large blue marlin baits. Schools of tarpon large enough to be the boast of Florida were also encountered, and a few taken on spoons. Dolphin beyond counting—barracouta—and many species of smaller fish of tropical waters—all just a little more than 7 hours' drive from Washington. Keep your eye on this fishing place, for in less than a couple of years many local anglers are going to be fishing it regularly.

Record White Marlin

Many local anglers know Capt. Leo Droughton from marlin fishing from his Sampan at Ocean City last year. Few know, however, that it was from his boat that the world-record white marlin was caught during the winter of 1938. And now there is another world's record. This time for wahoo. If you remember, it was during the last days of the recent Miami tournament that it was hiked to 93 pounds by Glenn J. Chec, and rated one of the outstanding catches of the winter. Now it is up another pound to 94, and the list of records due Mrs. A. W. Simons, of Charleston, S. C., on the catch is rather impressive. It is a new Atlantic record, a new North American record, and a new world's record for women anglers. Capt. Droughton will be back at Ocean City for the run of marlin about July 10.

We never could see this goggle fishing so much in the news for the past couple of years, where the fisher goes down after his prey with a lance. Granted that it is sporty beyond compare with certain fish—with others it would appear to be a setup. Yet we might not know all there is to it, for this year there is to be a goggle-fishing tournament at Beaufort in July. Even now, Lieut. Maynard Norden and David Stick, two followers of the new fishing, are practicing every day in the vicinity of Nags Head.

The first run of Spanish mackerel were caught off Southport, N. C., last week and yet some really optimistic fishermen are still looking for the bluefish schools, which failed to arrive with the first days of May—and which will be noted by their absence for still another season.

Sport Marvel Wins Deep Run Hunter Title

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., May 28.—Sport Marvel, almost 17 hands high and full-weighted with his 9 years, was awarded the grand champion hunter title today at the wind-up of the Deep Run Hunt Club's nineteenth annual horse show.

The brown son of Aga Khan was purchased recently by George Benoit, of Fredericksburg, from U. S. Randle, of Washington.

The show's other major title—grand champion jumper—went to Hobo, who pushed his 22-year-old frame over the jumps consistently for Malvern Bell, riding for Owner Howard H. Butz, of Keswick. Ace of Spades, owned by K. M. Bruce, of Ellerson, was named reserve jumper.

The five-gaited saddle championship went to All American, owned by Oscar Smith, of Norfolk. All American was the champion saddle horse of the Nation four years ago under handling of the Dixiana Farms. Smith bought the beautiful animal two years ago. The five-gaited reserve award went to Mary Hunt, owned by N. C. Wright, of Norfolk.

The judges made their decision on the hunter title from among five entries: Sport Marvel, Village Miss, Catalan Blue, owned by Mrs. Cary Jackson; George G. Lee's Lee's Birthday and Betty Couzens' Repulsion.

British Poloists Defeated, 10 to 4

New York, May 28 (AP).—The British polo team which will play the United States for the Westchester International Cup in a series starting next Saturday, took a 10-4 beating from a strong Long Island side on International Field at the Meadow Brook Club today.

The British gave perhaps their worst exhibition so far and were completely outplayed by a 32-goal quartet composed of three Americans, Ebby Gerry, Stewart Iglehart and Raymond Guest, riding with the British spare, John Lakin, at No. 2.

Prince George A.C. Nine Beats Petworth Twice

Both ends of a double bill were won by the diamond forces of Prince Georges A. C. yesterday. In the opener, Pitcher James beat Petworth by 4 to 2 and in the nightcap, Johnny Moran fanned 15 hitters for a 7-to-2 triumph over Camden Tavern. Both games were at MacGruder Park, where Prince Georges meets Klein Tavern tomorrow.

Royal Giants Win Twin Bill At Stadium

Beat Belleville, 6-3, In Opener and Take Nightcap, 15 to 12

The Royal Giants came from behind in both games of a double-header at Griffith Stadium yesterday to defeat Belleville, 6-3 and 15-12. The Giants' six-run rally in the sixth cinched the nightcap.

Walker pitched a heady game against the Belleville leaguers, coming up with a timely hit to help win his own game. Thrown in as Ben Taylor's fifth pitcher in the nightcap, he held the High Point sluggers in check, and delivered a two-bagger which put the Royals in the van.

The Royals started the second game with a seven-run drive in the first inning, but went to pieces in the fourth while the High Pointers were scoring nine runs, to take the lead, 11-8. Hall drove Johnson in with the tieing run in the eighth, the count being 12-all. Smith went to third.

Spectators who lined the Fort Belvoir side of the cove nearly saw John Maloney's beamy Tralee upset the pre-race dope in the class B handicap. Tralee finished the series one-tenth of a point behind Ralph Barnhard's Black Cat, the winner. Black Cat won the morning race and came third in the afternoon. Maloney's mahogany sloop took two seconds.

Things were fairly well scrambled in the class C handicap series. Jack Babcock's Indigo Under sailed off in an easy victory in the morning, beating Ralph Young aboard the Seabiscuit by nearly three minutes. He finished last in the afternoon haul, but managed to pile up enough series points to lead George Dankers helming Mrs. Cripps by a mere point. Mrs. Cripps, owned by Dick Shaw, took the afternoon run by erossing 55 seconds in front of Charles Gaillard in the Lucky Duck.

Steel Activity Forges Up to 48 Per Cent

First Gain in 12 Weeks General Rise in Orders Scrap Prices Higher

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, May 28.—A better tone in the steel market was reported today by the magazine Steel. It said that ingot production increased 2½ points to 48 per cent of capacity last week, the first gain in 12 weeks.

The publication asserted the upturn was caused in some districts by a general rise in demand rather than a recent bulge in low-price orders for sheet and strip. Stronger scrap markets accompany the gain in output.

Shipment of a large amount of flat-rolled steel booked lately will be deferred until next quarter, the magazine said, consequently ingot production will be supported for an extended period by this business. New buying will be retarded equally as long, and a test of current prices awaits the absorption of material now on order.

Lower Base Prices

Lower warehouse base prices on sheets, strip and bars were established last week with reductions also embracing plates and shapes in some districts. Producers' quotations were reasonably steady. Pig iron producers are expected to reaffirm current prices for the third quarter.

Increases in steelmaking last week included 3 points to 36 per cent at Pittsburgh, 3½ to 49 per cent at Chicago; 3 to 45 at Youngstown; 4 to 54 at Cleveland* 3 to 59 at Wheeling; 4½ to 42 at Buffalo, and 8 to 52 at Cincinnati. Detroit was down 2 to 57. Unchanged were eastern Pennsylvania at 37, Birmingham at 57, New England at 45 and St. Louis at 39.

Scrap prices at Pittsburgh and Chicago were stronger as a small price increase at the latter boosted the scrap composite 4 cents to $14. The finished steel composite remained firm at $55.70.

Wagner and Wage Acts Stifle Jobs, Babson Says

Calls Labor and Social Laws Most Dangerous Legislation Ever Passed in the United States

By Roger W. Babson

Babson Park, Mass., May 28.—I doubt if one person out of a hundred even yet realizes the far-reaching effects of our new labor and social laws. They are the most dangerous pieces of legislation ever passed in the United States. They are forcing people out of jobs every day. These acts are stifling industry, choking jobs, raising prices and holding back prosperity. I believe they are the cause of 50 per cent of the loss in jobs since 1936!

As a result of my article on the coal strike several weeks ago, the president of an important coal mining concern in the Southwest wrote me a very significant letter. He said: "I am satisfied that 70 per cent of the soft coal mine owners of the United States would far rather have Congress impose a tax of 100 per cent on net profits than to continue in force the present social security taxes of 4 per cent on payrolls. If a 100 per cent net profit tax were passed, employers could at least retain the funds they set aside for depreciation and depletion. In our case the tax we are being required to pay is in excess of 100 per cent of net profits!"

ROGER W. BABSON

Obstacles to Jobs

"We no longer have any hope that our mines can, under present day conditions, be operated profitably. We have felt, however, that in justice to our employes we should try to keep the mines going. But when our Government tells us that we must employ only union labor, that we must pay the maximum standard union wage, that we must pay time and one-half to any employe who happens to work more than 44 hours per week, that we must contribute 3 per cent of our payrolls to a fund from which our union employes can collect $15 per week when they elect to strike, then our Government compels us to quit. The sad part of it is that the ones who suffer the most are the workers for whose benefit this legislation was supposedly enacted."

These same thoughts are running through the minds of millions of voters all over the nation. After talking with many of them during recent weeks here are my own conclusions about the four big social and labor programs:

1. Wagner Act: Unionism is here to stay. Die-hards must recognize this fact. Unionism is all right, too, when all business is organized. The trouble comes when part of industry is unionized and part is not. When an entire industry is organized, labor leaders and workers will stop fighting employers and will try to help them make some money. The Wagner Act, however, must be amended to make it equally fair to all parties. The present law cannot succeed in its purposes unless it is amended.

2. Social Security For Old Age: This program, too, is all right in principle. It is a great step in the right direction. However, it needs substantial revisions. It should be placed on a "pay-as-you-go" basis. This means that it should be financed out of the tax levy each year. Moreover, it should apply to everyone. Dr. Townsend is correct in insisting that the present Reserve Fund is a snare and delusion. The huge Social Security tax receipts piling into Washington are simply providing the spenders there with a big fat pocketbook to buy votes. To date the Reserve Fund contains only a bunch of Government IOU's which later may not be worth a tinker's damn if spending continues at the present rate.

3. Unemployment Compensation: This is the bunk. It is just politics. If we should go into a real depression it simply will not work. It violates all the principles of insurance. Fire insurance is based on the theory that one house out of a certain number will burn down. Life insurance is based on the idea that one person out of a certain number will die. Unemployment, however, comes in huge waves. Millions are out of work at the same time. Furthermore, if this unemployment insurance is to be continued, all employes should contribute as well as employers. A tax of three per cent on employers' payrolls alone, as is the law in many States, is a terrific burden. It is reacting against labor.

4. Wages and Hour Act: In principle, this says, "You can have better times by working shorter hours, paying higher wages, and producing less goods." Insofar as the Wage Act eliminates sweat shops this is O. K., but there is plenty of "chiseling" going on. I fear the Wage Act may bog down just as the NRA codes did. Employers may refuse to obey it. I know of companies where this Act at first forced the hiring of additional help; but the extra employes boosted production costs and selling prices. The latter cut down sales and plant activity and finally brought on lay-offs that more than offset the additional jobs created.

An Earnest Appeal

As my mine operator correspondent says: "The Government can make employers obey the Social Security Programs, the Wagner Act, and the Wage and Hour Act; but the Government cannot make employers remain in business nor engage in new enterprises and thus create tax obligations which they are not able to pay. Many employers like myself are tired of the struggle. They feel that whatever good they have done as employers is not appreciated. Since they can have more left for themselves and more leisure and vastly less trouble by simply quitting than they can by carrying on, it is inevitable that those who can will quit, while many others will be forced to quit anyway."

Here is an employer speaking from the bottom of his heart. This man is not "a political reactionary," not "a prince of privilege," not "an economic royalist." He is simply a decent American citizen who, while hard-pressed, has been trying to keep his employes at work and to keep them off "relief." He is now disgusted with the whole caboodle and he is throwing up his hands. I agree with him that we can have no real prosperity until the Administration takes steps to remove these obstacles which they have placed right in the path of better business and more jobs.

Demands of Farms Cut Unemployment

New York, May 28 (AP).—Unemployment in the United States declined 2 per cent in April to around 10,177,000 as the present month opened, the National Industrial Conference Board reported today.

The board said that the jobless in April decreased by 220,000.

The decline, it was added, was "due largely to considerable increase in the number of agricultural workers, which is usual at this time of year."

No Runs

New York, May 28.—A stocking Utopia for women is indicated for 1940 when the duPont Co.'s new plant for the manufacture of nylon will be completed. Sample pairs of stockings made of this new synthetic have been worn for three weeks by girls working at the company's World Fair exhibit, it is reported, without developing holes or runs.

Rukeyser Says: All at Work Is Only a Way To the End

International News Service Economic Commentator.

New York, May 28.—The depression creates the optical illusion that the goal of a national economy is to provide jobs. The error of this assumption is discernible in examining the state of employment in the militarized nations of Europe. Through regimentation, European nations have made progress in licking the problem of unemployment.

But they have diverted their energies increasingly into the unproductive channels of producing armament and war materials. Thus, the additional working hours have not been devoted to creating more and better goods for the comfort and enjoyment of typical families.

In backward economies, such as in China, there is normally rather full employment. In slave economies, there is full employment. But in such reactionary economies, the common people do not enjoy high living standards. This clarifies the nature of our economic problem.

Full employment is only a means to an end. The real objective of prosperity is maintenance and improvement of a high standard of living for the people.

Peace an Essential

This can be attained by balancing the national economy and using improved technology and full employment of manpower to produce more and better necessities and comfort goods for the people.

This presupposes peace externally and internally. International conflict, actual or latent, results in an undue diversion of work power into unproductive channels (armament). Internal conflict—class warfare—likewise reduces productive efficiency.

From the standpoint of the national economy, keeping able-bodied workers out of jobs is a waste of a precious resource, namely, the workpower of unemployed people.

The ideal is to call the idle back to productive jobs, and turn their energies to making desirable and useful things which add to the happiness of the people.

When the principal producing groups, such as farmers, factory workers, and those in the service occupations are in balanced income relationships to one another, they provide jobs for one another through interchanging the products of their year's labor.

Over here, the depression consists of a series of maladjustments, which blockade the channels of trade, interfering with a free exchange of goods and services.

Industrial costs and prices in the United States, reflecting the effect of tariff and social legislation, are pegged high above the international price level, whereas farm prices, more subject to the international price level, are on a substantially lower basis. The basic difference, or disparity, reflects itself in depression and unemployment.

Call the Idle Back to Work

It is important to summon the idle back to work so that they can contribute to the national heap of goods as much as they take out. On theotner hand, if the idle receive doles or are put to make-work, they necessarily lean on the self-supporting, and do not renew the supply of goods and services proportionately to their own consumption. Thus, it is not only important to provide jobs, but also to provide such jobs as will result in the efficient production of desirable things and services. Such production creates the basis for a self-perpetuating cycle of exchange.

For some time, the totalitarian countries have boasted of full employment, though their people live on standards of living vastly below our own even in periods of depression. With the militarization of France, Great Britain, and the neutral countries, western Europe, too, is beginning to turn its attention from unemployment to a prospective labor shortage. But the beneficial results of the change are perverted by the preoccupation with the building and accumulation of nonproductive sinews of war.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

One of the chief divertissements of bridge players is discussing the relative losses from underbidding and overbidding. Since all bridge players, including experts, fall into one classification or the other, it is a question of considerable interest.

Good players will tell you that they would rather play as partner with an overbidder than an underbidder. An overbidder can always be counted on to overbid; one skilled in the art can determine, almost to the trick, how much the optimist opposite them will inflate his hand. But an underbidder occasionally will turn up without any of the values he is suspected of hoarding, and the resulting cave-in of the bid undertaken is sad to behold.

♡Q98
◇KQ6
♣AKJ987

By all means the bidding should be opened with this strong hand. The six-card suit and three-plus quick tricks are more than enough to warrant a safe rebid. To pass first and come into the bidding later with an overcall would give partner a serious misconception of the hand.

Missing game through failure to give full value of a raise at once is a common result of excessive timidity. An example is presented by K. G. McI. from duplicate play where conservatism generally is rewarded. In this case the South player gave a belated raise, withholding from his partner information which would reveal his true strength.

Here are the cards and the bidding:

♡Q753
◇AJ
♣862

SOUTH
♡AK
◇84
♣KJ953

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 N.T.	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

We have no quarrel with South's first bid of two clubs, but on the second round he should jump to four spades, having excellent trump support and 2½ quick tricks. He could easily have bid three spades the first round, if he had desired, in which case North could have gone to four with safety.

Underbidding can confuse and add to the normal problems of a hand, sometimes throwing out of focus the entire situation. A decision as to whether or not to continue bidding over the adversaries' game contract was made much more difficult by the South player's failure to bid his full strength earlier in the proceedings.

M. U. presents the question. Here is South's hand:

♠None
♡AJ9862
◇AQ42
♣865

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	1 ♠	2 ♡	3 ◇
3 ♡	3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠

What is South's bid?

It seems to us that South made it hard for himself by not jumping to four hearts as soon as he received an assist from his partner.

This would leave the decision whether to go to five hearts or double the four spades to his partner, who might be in a better position to judge the possibilities.

As it stands, it is a pure guess; probably the safest decision is to go to five hearts.

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

Government employes interested in spending all or part of their vacations at camp this summer with their families will converge upon the new Interior Building auditorium at 8 p. m. Wednesday for a program on the Hi-Catoctin Camp.

Motion pictures and slides in natural colors of activities at the camp, 60 miles west of Washington, near Frederick, Md., will be shown and talks will be given by the following:

Miss Irma Ringe, chairman of the Federal Camp Council; M. C. Huppuch, National Park Service, and A. B. S. Martin, director of Hi-Catoctin Camp.

Federal workers also are invited to attend a picnic which will be held in the camp's recreation area on June 4, beginning at 10 a. m. Outdoor fireplaces, tables and drinking water will be provided and a program of hiking, sports and stunts is planned.

Suggestion—Drop by the Baltimore & Ohio ticket offices, 1508 H street northwest, for a view of the window display of pictures made at the New York World's Fair when the "Beauties With Brains" winners were feted there recently.

At Thursday's meeting of Lodge No. 288, A. F. G. E., T. J. Mead will present a resolution censuring Charles I. Stengle, national president, for "openly expressed indifference to the protection of the members of his organization."

The controversy stems from Stengle's recent letter to a member of Lodge No. 228 in which the federation president minimized the danger to older, bona fide competitive appointees resulting from the blanketing into the civil service of New Deal appointees.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace will speak on the future of agriculture at 4:40 p. m. today in the South Building auditorium in the last of a series of forums sponsored by Local No. 2, United Federal Workers of America. The series was designed to promote employe understanding of the department's work.

In the latest issue of its "Union Banner," Local No. 15 of U. F. W. A. protests what it terms unfair overtime requirements in the procurement division of the supply service, Veterans' Administration.

"Who benefits by the overtime?" the local asks. "Certainly not the overworked typists and clerks who receive neither compensatory time off nor extra pay. Is this one of the means which millions of dollars of appropriated funds may be turned by the Veterans' Administration each year?"

Oliver C. Short, personnel director of the Commerce Department, will discuss that department's new personnel policy at 4 p. m. June 7 in the Commerce Building auditorium. The meeting is sponsored by Local No 23, UFWA.

The American Indian is pictured neither as a savage nor as a member of a dying race but as a vital human being passing through the transitions required by the invasion of an overwhelming foreign civilization in the murals of Maynard Dixon, just put on view in the Indian office section of the new interior building.

Dean S. S. Steinberg, of the University of Maryland Engineering School, will address the Federal Bar Association luncheon at the National Press Club. His subject is, "Land Title Description by Reference to a System of Plane Co-ordinates."

Lawyers in the Federal service are invited to attend the Federal Bar Association luncheons, which are held every Wednesday at 12:30 p. m.

Bob Burns Says—

I don't know of any slogan that's truer than "It Pays to Advertise." Advertisin' is the life-blood of business and, as far as that goes, in everyday life, too. I don't mean a person oughta go around braggin' about hisself, but he'll be happier if he lives so that folks say nice things about him behind his back.

One time Grandpaw Snelson was showin' a stranger all the sights around Van Buren. The fellow said, "This old abandoned mine is dangerous! Why don't you put a railing around it?"

Grandpaw said, "The City Council won't allow it, bud. You see, the more strangers that fall down there—the more famous that old mine becomes."

Secrets in Love

By Phyllis Moore Gallagher

Chapter XXII

Joan's taxi trailed the green car down P street through the dark platinum night. The driver did not let it out of sight once and Joan was confident the man did not know he was being followed. She had seen him lean out the window and look back at Aunt Mehalie's house before starting away from the curb; and again as his car turned the corner. But he did not notice her cab.

As she rode, Joan fingered hastily in her bag for something on which to write a note to Anthony. She wouldn't she supposed, be able to telephone him. But she could find nothing save a small card on which she had scribbled a shopping list a long while ago. She had stuck it in the compartment with her mirror and had not thought of it again.

Joan Has Missing Card

She remembered making that shopping list, of having found the card in Peg's wigstand when she had been searching for something on which to write. She had meant to ask Peg if the card was of any value, but had forgotten it until now. She looked at the card again now and read the printed words:

Not much business done on your holdings. I give the market quotations as follows: 160-30, 188-10, 250-11, 25-19, 765-21, 839-45, 176-00, 176-23, 187-45, 1938-21.

Sam Jones.

Well, it couldn't have been of any importance or Peg would have mentioned missing it. She began promptly to erase the message to make space for her note to Anthony. But the writing seemed to be indelible, so she erased her own pencil marks and was sitting there ready to jot down her message when the man reached his destination and she had something definite to report to her brother.

It was after 7 o'clock now. The downtown traffic was snarled and impatient, moving slowly behind the pulsing red and green lights. Joan fixed one eye on the car ahead and sank back on the cab seat with a sigh, conscious of how tired she was after a day at the salon catering to the whims and the maddening indecisions of wealthy women.

Joan smiled at the memory of Duncan's husky, ringing laugh. It was fun to make him laugh and to watch that sober light go out of his eyes. She sat up a little on the seat then, her attention on the car they were following. But it was only with half of her thoughts that she watched it; the other half clung to Duncan.

Memories

And all at once she was remembering last night with her heart stirring gently. Living over again those moments in Aunt Mehalie's kitchen where she and Duncan had been washing supper dishes. She had closed the cabinet door on the last carefully wiped dish and had gone over to the sink to wash her hands. She had come back to Duncan slowly and had stood quite still and smiled up at him. Their eyes were almost level with Duncan leaning negligently against the table, the back of his palms on the edge of it, bracing his weight.

She had said, abruptly: "For a long while now I have wanted to kiss you, Duncan. May I?

"That," Duncan had said easily enough, "sounds like a very interesting proposition. Indeed, my lass, an inspired one. Shall we be off in a cloud of dust?" He had leaned forward, grinning at her and she had kissed him on the lips.

For a moment the kitchen was absurdly still. The clock ticking evenly on the shelf over the stove, the February wind wailing around the house and the fluttery hush of snow flakes melting against the warm window panes. But there was no other sound. Then Duncan said, his hands falling away from her shoulders:

"Look here, brat . . . I'm a cad to say this, maybe, but kissing a guy like that is very apt to get you into trouble one of these days. I wouldn't go around doing it, if I were you. I'd sort of save up for the right guy, some one I loved . . ."

She had looked into his eyes then. Steadily. There had been no imp of mockery in her gaze. She had said, very evenly, very softly:

"I don't go around kissing men, Duncan. With the exception of a few impersonal pecks gathered in Uncle Nathaniel's vestibule I have saved up for the right guy. I have known, ever since I was old enough to understand about love, that some day I would kiss some one exactly like that."

"Joan, you can't mean . . . ! Now, look here, I haven't done anything or said anything to make you believe that I . . . "

Joan's Confession

She had interrupted quickly: "No, Duncan. I managed to bring this on myself, quite by myself. You aren't in the least responsible. You see, I know about Nadeja Damara . . . and you. That for some reason you have stopped seeing her . . . even though you haven't forgotten her. Duncan, I'm not asking you to marry me . . . "

He would have spoken then, but she put a slim forefinger on his lips, silencing him: "You've liked dashing around with me, haven't you, Duncan? You've forgotten to remember Nadeja a little when you've been with me, haven't you? And you liked kissing me just then. You liked it almost too much, didn't you, Duncan?"

Duncan's jaw had shot out. "Maybe I did. But that hasn't anything to do with love. Any man would have kissed you when you asked him to—and liked it. He'd be a blithering jackass if he didn't. Joan, look . . . you're just a baby. You don't know what you're saying. You don't even know what you really want. And you don't mean this, see?" His hands were on her shoulders now, shaking her roughly. "You don't mean it, see!"

She had smiled at him suddenly. "You're being very kind, Duncan. You're trying to save my pride, but it's a wasted gesture. You see, I really don't have any pride where you're concerned. I happen to love you very much. And I shan't outgrow it. Naturally, I'd like for you to marry me, but if—if . . . well, I'd do just about anything you wanted, Duncan. Always."

Joan closed her eyes for just a moment as she sat in the cab and let herself drift back to the feel of Duncan's lips on her own, of the pressure of his arms around her, jerked erect on the seat, Duncan suddenly very remote in her memory.

Finding the Hideout

Ahead of her the green car turned into an alley running alongside a cheap four-story hotel. Over the door in electric lights was a sign which read: Rooms, 50 cents, 75 cents, $1, $1.50. Cross the second floor, in neon lights, blinked the incongruously impressive letters "Imperial Hotel." Peg instructed the cabbie to stop and wait, and she darted into the alley, pressing along close to the wall. She saw the man park his green car, stagger blindly to a back entrance and disappear into it.

Like a flash Joan was behind him. On the fire stairway she heard his leaden tread, heard the second-floor exit open and close. Joan waited a second, her heart thumping furiously. Then she was up the remaining steps, her nose pressed against a slice of space at the door.

The man went to room 202, gave a strange staccato tap on the door. "Old speak-easy stuff," thought Joan, who had been a small red-headed child when "speaks" were flourishing. And then the door opened.

Joan blinked her eyes, her breath came in a short gasp. She saw Nadeja Damara standing there in a soft light, her golden hair flowing around her shoulders, her face turning a sudden stark white. She cried out in a stricken voice, 'Emmanuel!" Then her pale arms were around him, helping him through the door, closing it quickly after them.

For a long moment Joan couldn't move. She thought, wildly: "This can't be—true. This is some nightmare. I'll wake up in a moment and realize I dreamed the whole thing."

Flashing a Message

But it was no nightmare. She stood there feeling the strange reality of its moving up and down her spine like icy fingers. What on earth did it mean? Emmanuel Damara and his wife in this strange dump? Emmanuel emerging from Aunt Mehalie's with blood dripping from an obviously wounded shoulder. In her panic she could think of only one thing: Emmanuel Damara, in a raging fit of jealousy, had gone to Aunt Mehalie's looking for Duncan. But that didn't fit somehow. No man who had gone off to murder his wife's lover would return to her arms in just the way Emmanuel Damara had. He wouldn't, she thought, return, at all. And this cheap little hotel? What did it all mean?

Joan fished in her bag again, hastily, and began writing on the card in a tiny scrawl:

"Give this driver $5, please, Anthony. I followed the man who came out of Aunt Mehailie's. I thought he was the one who had been breaking in lately. But he's Emmanuel Damara, which you probably already know, and he's with Mme. Damara in room 202, Imperial Hotel. "I'm here on the indoor fire stairway, and I'll wait here until I have some word from you. I'm probably a screwball, but I followed an impulse and am still following it. I have always wanted to trail some sinister-looking character, and this seemed a swell chance. You know me. JOAN."

Then she sped down the stairs, cut through the alley and sent the cab whirling off to Georgetown. In less than two minutes she was back on the second-floor landing, her nose pressed to the crack in the door . . . waiting. She felt completely absurd and a little afraid, but somehow it seemed the thing to do.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

Palestine's Pavilion at Fair Opened

Einstein, Senator King Praise Building and Work in Homeland

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, May 28.—The Jewish Palestine pavilion at the World's Fair was opened today with an elaborate dedication service held in the Court of Peace. Police estimated that 100,000 persons were in the area for the ceremony, in which Dr. Albert Einstein was principal speaker.

The throng was believed to be the largest audience for any single event at the fair so far.

The large attendance was designed, in part, as a public expression of protest against the British plan to restrict Jewish immigration into Palestine and eventually to make the country an independent state, with an Arab majority. Many speakers denounced that plan and asserted their belief that the protest of world Jewry could block the new British program.

Lauds Nobility of Building

In his dedicatory address, Dr. Einstein said, in part:

"The thing that will strike the discerning observer about this structure is its quiet nobility, the spirit of simplicity and harmony which pervades it.

"In Palestine, a handful of people is threatened by the political intrigues of the powers. Sheer brutal mob violence would rob it of achievements won at the price of hard work and bitter sacrifice . . .

"Nothing of this now shows here: we see only the quiet noble lines of a building and within it a presentation of the Palestine homeland, a practical demonstration of what productive work has there created. Only a people that has found an inner security can thus express itself."

Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, led the attack on the British "White Paper" plan for Palestine.

Jewish Works Will Endure

"Even at this crucial hour for the Jewish homeland—an hour in which the entire civilized world is shocked by the British government's unconscionable repudiation of its sacred pledges . . . the Jews of Palestine have shunned the use of violence in registering their protests and indignation," King said.

"As long as the Jews continue to answer White Papers with further colonization and broader settlement activities, what they have so gloriously built in Palestine will endure long after the Hitlers and Mussolinis have passed from the earth."

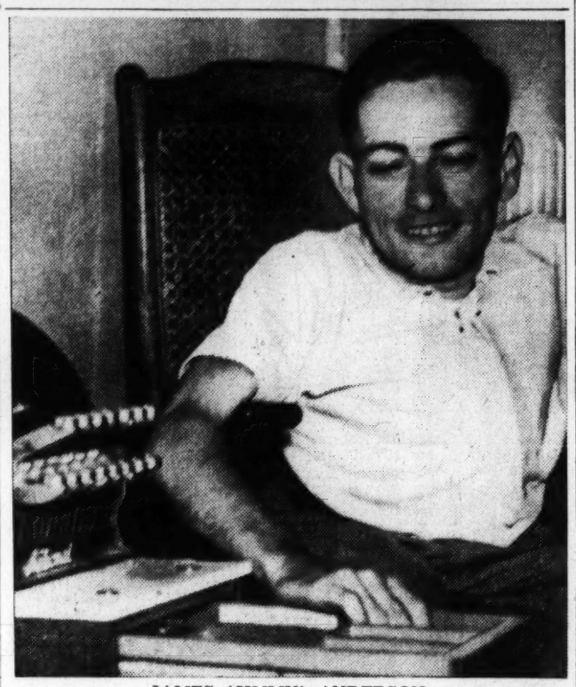
Crippled by Police Car at 3, Jimmy Anderson Has Built Up a 'Swell' Poolroom Business

McKinley Graduate Tolerates No Rowdies, Inebriates or Loafers



JAMES (JIMMY) ANDERSON

To be crippled for life, and by a police car at that, would seem to be a cloud that couldn't possibly have a silver lining, but Jimmy Anderson, his face wreathed in smiles, thought otherwise yesterday.

Jimmy, who was graduated with honors from McKinley High School last June, is confident that he is on the road to financial independence at last. The frequent ringing of a cash register on his right sings out in corroboration.

"Some of my friends," said the 22-year-old invalid, "look askance because I've gone into the billiard hall business. But don't worry, I'll give them no cause to be skeptical. They feel that way because they don't think that a fellow who went through high school and got pretty good grades ought to operate a poolroom.

"But my poolroom tolerates no loafers. Anyone who has been drinking isn't allowed to play. Do these fellows look or act like rowdies?"

Though the afternoon was hot, five of Jimmy's eight tables were in use and, true enough, the players were clean cut in appearance, were not loud and seemingly were thinking only of staying away from the 8-ball.

Crippled since 3, when he was struck by a police car chasing some bandits, Anderson was educated at the Weightman School for Physically Handicapped Childern and McKinley. In high school he studied draftsmanship, because friends said that would be a good occupation, "but I didn't like it for anything."

After graduation, he floundered around in quest of gainful employment, but got nowhere until last September, when a poolroom proprietor leased the refreshments concession to him. A few weeks later the operator moved out and Jimmy, with financial aid from his father, reopened the billiard hall with himself as owner and manager.

"Business became so good," said the youth, "that I soon found my three-table place was too small. Three weeks ago I moved into this place, taking a partner. People may complain about business being bad, but ours is swell."

500 Middies Hear Nautical Baccalaureate

Have Last Chapel as June Week Crowds Pour Into Annapolis

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., May 28.—A nautical text—"He Shall Even Have the Great Sea for a Border"—rang out through the historic Naval Academy Chapel today as 500 midshipmen of the class of '39 gathered there for the last time and heard a sea-flavored baccalaureate sermon by Chaplain W. N. Thomas.

The vaulted chapel, filled with parents and undergraduates, was hushed as Chaplain Thomas quoted at length from the sonorous, almost Old Testament phrasing of Kahill Gibran's "The Prophet."

"'Sons of my ancient mother, you riders of the tide, how often have you sailed in my dreams . . . ready am I to go, and my eagerness with sails full set awaits the wind.'"

"Will Stand Among You"

With solemn emphasis, the chaplain read his next pointed paragraph to the midshipmen who will be ensigns next Thursday, commissioned as professional sea fighters.

"'Only another breath will I drawn in this still air, only another loving look cast backward, and then I will stand among you, a seafarer among seafarers.'"

The baccalaureate sermon was the feature of the day's June Week program. In deference to the Sabbath, the only other scheduled event was the midshipmen's orchestra and glee club recital, a traditional feature of June Week.

The battleships New York, Texas and Arkansas, anchored in Annapolis Roads 4 miles off the Academy, were opened to the public and were a magnet for the 15,000 tourists and relatives of midshipmen who crowded Annapolis for the week-long ceremonies.

Secret Service Takes Precautions; Buses in Municipal Parking Center To Provide Space for Spectators

Secret Service men have questioned occupants of virtually every privately owned building along the route to be taken by King George and Queen Elizabeth when they arrive here June 8, The Post learned yesterday.

All plans for renting seats or windows commanding a view of the parade are subject to Secret Service approval. The Treasury agents also have requested of numerous shopkeepers on lower Pennsylvania avenue the names of persons who will view the procession from their stores.

Interviewing proprietors of parking lots, souvenir shops and gas stations along the royal route on their plans for the 20 minutes after the British rulers arrive at Union Station, The Post yesterday received the same answer everywhere:

"I've worked on the avenue for 15 years and never watched a parade yet," said Paul Shapiro, manager of the Washington Drug Store. "I don't think I'll watch this one either. We're going to be open for business as usual."

The same attitude prevailed at the Atlantic Cafe, where one employe said he knew of "no special plans" for the occasion, though he had an idea "the boss may ask in a few friends to watch from the windows." At a hamburger castle one counter-man ventured a guess that he will "step out on the sidewalk when they go by." Otherwise, he said, "it'll be just like any other day."

Joseph Wasserman, proprietor of the New Deal Photo Studio, which also handles replicas of the Capitol and pillow-slips with pictures of the Washington Monument, confessed that he doesn't know what to do about the parade.

"I guess there will be some peddlers down from New York with pictures of the King and Queen," he said. Wasserman recalled that he still has some British flags left over from World War days, when he was running a souvenir shop in Georgetown, but he's afraid "the moths have been eating them."

Samuel Lovenbein, manager of the huge Municipal Center parking lot, hopes to park 20 buses along the Constitution avenue side of the lot, so 600 people can watch the parade at $2.20 a head. "I expect to be pretty busy myself but I want to take time to look the King over," he said.

At "the world's largest gas station," 261 Constitution avenue, an assistant manager, Robert L. Rand, pointed out that all nearby streets will be roped off "and we can't do any business with automobiles that morning." He predicted, however, that all 38 station employes "will be down here looking pleasant."
